UYA opens 50 volunteer jobs

The University Year for Action program is seeking 50 students who want to combine their academic studies with nine months of community service in Lane County.

Applications deadline for the volunteer program is Feb. 8. Students selected to participate in UYA will begin work April 1.

Students accepted for UYA placements work 32 hours per week to expand services or develop new programs for low-income people. Among those served are children and youths, senior citizens and adult special populations such as the mentally and emotionally disturbed, the developmentally disabled and clients of the correctional system.

In addition to their work in community agencies, UYA students spend three hours a week in a seminar supervised by community service and public affairs department faculty.

The program is open to junior, senior and graduate students in disciplines concerned with human development and community service.

Application forms and further information are available at the Eugene UYA office, 431 W. 13th Ave., Suite 1, or call 686-3813. On campus, students can pick up and return applications at the CSPA office in 119 Hendricks Hall, telephone 686-3895.
