UT opens drama Friday

Interested in a little power, comedy and terror? Streamers, a drama by David Rabe which opens Friday in the Robinson Theatre, offers all of the above.

The play examines the feelings of young men about to be sent to war in Vietnam. The central action takes place in the cadre room where three men — an intellectual, a street-wise black and a homosexual — await further orders.

According to the play's director, Faber DeChaine, "its subject is really about the power, the fear and the frustration of building a society in the military."
