EMU CULTURAL FORUM presents
FRANCOIS TRUFFAUT'S DAY FOR NIGHT
This Oscar winning film star Jacqueline Bisset and Jean-Pierre Leaud (400 Blows). It's about some people making a film, with Truffaut himself playing the director of a film within a film. In the course of making the film, he's called upon to settle various traumas which beset individual members of the film crew, which could snarl the production. In one funny memorable scene, the lead actress (Bisset) refuses to play a scene because she wants some real butter. Coping with incidents such as this serve to coalesce the group and enable them to finish the film. DAY FOR NIGHT is often cited as one of the truest and funniest films about filmmaking. It is mostly English with some subtitled French sections.

Sir Alec Guinness of STAR WARS fame in The Lavender Hill Mob
Here Alex Guinness leads, perhaps one of the wackiest bunch of crooks in motion picture history and one of the best British comedies. A meekly anonymous bank clerk, together with his "Lavender Hill Mob," perpetrates one of the most daring robberies in comic cinema. The dialogue, the characters, and the chase are all superbly funny. Also showing is a hilarious Peter Seller/Spike Milligan short - THE CASE OF THE MUKKIN-ESE BATTLE HORN.

TO THE BOYS OF SIGMA CHI:
My, how the rumors fly
There is a mix-up about last spring
It has do with the redhead fling
The girl involved has short red hair
Her well-built chest attracts the stares
The confusion of the U.B. award
I want to clear:
The mole is the rightful owner around here!
The tall red haired coronation date -
This ridiculous rumor she did not anticipate I hope this straightens things out Or I may have to shout...

JANELL #207 DeBUSK:
I saw you, I lost my heart With you I am that which cannot be seen by others With you I am all that I can be With you, you bring out the best in me
With you, I can be comfortable and oh so calm
With you, I can be as no other With you, I can be loving With you, no one else sees
What you can see in me
With you, my heart leaps and pounds trying to jump from its depth With you I must breathe deeply, to keep from bursting
With you I can move mountains
With you I feel everything
With you my soul leaps in joy Without You I am an empty being being blown away and along by emptiness
