

Eagles win trip to Super Bowl

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Wilbert Montgomery, reportedly hobbled by a sore knee, ran for 194 yards and scored one touchdown Sunday as the Philadelphia Eagles beat the Dallas Cowboys 20-7 to win the National Football Conference championship and advance to the Super Bowl.

Montgomery, whose 42-yard touchdown run gave the Eagles a 7-0 lead just 2:11 into the game, became the first player to gain 100 yards or more against Dallas in the Cowboys' 29 playoff games. Montgomery wound up two yards shy of the NFL playoff rushing record of 196 yards set by the Eagles' Steve Van Buren in 1949 against the Los Angeles Rams.

Dallas tied the score in the second quarter on a three-yard run by Tony Dorsett, but the Eagles went ahead to stay with 7:42 left in the third quarter on Tony Franklin's 26-yard field goal.

Philadelphia wrapped it up with a nine-yard scoring burst by fullback Leroy Harris with 1:47 left in the third quarter.

...and so do the Raiders

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Jim Plunkett passed for two touchdowns, one covering 65 yards to Raymond Chester on a deflection, and ran for another score in a wild first period that propelled the Oakland Raiders past San Diego into the Super Bowl Sunday by a 34-27 score.

Dan Fouts, San Diego's record-smashing passer, completed 22 of 45 attempts for 336 yards and two touchdowns to Charlie Joiner. But the Raiders intercepted him twice and pounced on a costly fumble by the Chargers' Mike Thomas, which led to an Oakland score.

Plunkett was far more precise than his more heralded rival. Along with the electrifying bomb to Chester, he passed 21 yards for a touchdown to running back Kenny King and sprinted five yards for a score when his receivers were covered during the Raiders' 21-point first period.
