THE EMU CULTURAL FORUM and THE CREATIVE WRITING PROGRAM present
W.S. MERWIN
In a reading of his poetry and prose
A New York-born poet and poet-translator, Merwin has traveled widely and currently resides in Hawaii; he has published works translated from French, Spanish, Latin, Portuguese, Chinese, and Japanese originals - including Twenty Love Poems and A Song of Despair, from Pablo Neruda, in 1969. In addition to the Pulitzer Prize in 1971 and the Shelley Memorial Award in 1974, he has received grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, the Rockefeller Foundation, the Academy of American Poets, the National Institute of Arts, and the Arts Council of Great Britain.
W.S. Merwin is known as the purveyor of the "stone and bone" school of poetry; throughout his career he has departed radically from an earlier style of controlled, elegant verse (e.g. A Mask for Janus, 1952) toward looser, individual forms (The Drunk in the Furnace, 1960), and has been moving more toward open, surrealistic poems since the publication of The Moving Target (1963). He works less with "craft" and "old techniques" than with "imagination" and "enigmatic necessity;" his translations also demonstrate a gradual move from archetype and myth toward a kind of mysticism that is evidenced in his prose piece "Turgvinder's Stone" (from The Miner's Pale Children, 1970).

I, CLAUDIUS PARTS 5 and 6
"It's about a family business called ruling the world." Fiendish Livia really outdoes herself in #5 POISON IS QUEEN; Augustus takes mysteriously ill when he lends a sympathetic ear to Germanicus' stories of Livia's manipulations. On Augustus' death, Livia emerges triumphant with a forged will naming Tiberius as heir. In #6 SOME JUSTICE, he nearly loses the throne when the popular Germanicus dies in suspicious circumstances. With Livia and Tiberius in power, Claudius has to be even more careful, for Livia suspects him of talking with Augustus before his death.
