WHY NOT!

(pourquoi pas?)

Coline Serreau has made more than just a light comedy of three young bourgeois who drop traditional expectations and adopt the roles they feel most comfortable with in an unusual menage a trois. Many of the laughs have a sharp edge that remain with you.

LUMIERE

Jeanne Moreau, the noted French actress, wrote and directed LUMIERE, as well as starring in it. LUMIERE tells the story of four actresses of different ages and their relationships with men, with their careers, with time - the almost invisible enemy - and with one another. Each is torn in some different way between the traditional feminine needs - stability, the nurture of some fixed situation - and the compulsion to appear and move in the light. The light, the "lumiere" of the title, is limelight, the world's attention. At its best, LUMIERE is a subtle, funny and moving film. SUBTITLES

AGATHA

Starring Vanessa Redgrave and Dustin Hoffman. On December 4, 1926, Agatha Christie, the world's greatest mystery writer, disappeared. What may have happened during the next 11 days is far more suspenseful than anything else she ever wrote. Was Agatha researching background for a story or just taking a break from an unhappy marriage? Hoffman plays an American reporter sent to decipher the mystery. AGATHA is a reasonable and possible - yet fictional - answer to what actually happened during the 11 days that Agatha Christie was missing.
