

Reagan speech to seek public cooperation for cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pres. Ronald Reagan, in his televised speech to Congress Wednesday night, will seek to make "the people a partner" in combating the nation's economic woes, his spokesman said Monday.

As Reagan and his wife, Nancy, returned from a holiday weekend at Camp David, Md., White House press secretary James S. Brady said the speech will seek to enlist public cooperation in a drastic program of tax and spending cuts.

"There's a lot of 'making the people a partner' in the plan," Brady said. "It's not simply the Reagan plan. It's going to be 'our plan'."

The speech, said Brady, will be "a clarion call saying it's not going to be 'business as usual.'" A first draft of the address was circulated in the White House Monday morning.

After his speech, the president will back away and let his economic experts and Cabinet members take over the task of explaining the program's details, Brady said.

Reagan's aides worked Monday to assemble five documents which, along with the speech to a joint session of the House and Senate at 9 p.m. EST Wednesday, will make up the economic package.

The five documents are an approximately 30-page written message, a 12- to 15-page "fact sheet," the actual budget proposals, a two-part tax document detailing Reagan's proposals for a capital recovery program for business and income tax cuts for individuals, and several pages of regulatory revision proposals.

The spokesman outlined a campaign to keep the limelight on Reagan's proposals.
