Hunt named CEP head

The University Community Education Program (CEP) has a new coordinator who knows community education first-hand — and wants to encourage "others of all ages to try it."

Corrine Hunt became acting CEP coordinator in January, replacing Chris Munoz. Hunt previously had been CEP outreach coordinator for two years.

Munoz is now associate director of college-school relations at Humboldt State University in Arcata, Calif.

Through CEP, approximately

800 community members become University students every term through enrollment in regular classes at a reduced tuition rate.

"Our students range from high school age to a man of 86, and our classes are that diverse also, ranging from calculus to mid-life transition," Hunt says.

Hunt believes community education helps the older student, especially "those changing careers in midstream who need additional education for this retooling. But many take classes for pure enjoyment."
