

Music comes to town

Although little has been heard, the university music school continues to play loudly. In the coming week musical offerings abound.

- Today a "Musical Smorgasbord" will present composition students performing original works at 12:30 p.m. in Room 198.
- Tomorrow night The Chamber Music Series presents the Aulos Ensemble performing "An Evening in the Home of J.S. Bach" at 8 p.m. in Beall Concert Hall.
- Pianist Kim Hayashi performs his master's degree recital on Saturday at 8 p.m. at Beall Concert Hall.

Call the music school at 686-5678 for ticket information.

Licking the Plate

As you may or may not remember, two Emerald writers were assigned the breakfast beat, forced by their editor to eat all sorts of strange organic and inorganic food substances served in the area's restaurants between 8 and 11 a.m. Last time we heard from our intrepid writers they were recovering from a bout with toomuchplasticfooditis, incurred at their last stop on the beat, McDonald's. They regained their health long enough to allow them a visit to another of Eugene's unique breakfast spots, the Original Pancake House.

This is their report, flung across Franklin Blvd. and onto the editor's desk on a leftover Swedish Pancake. The writers, at last report, were still beached on the south shore of the Willamette, sending smoke-signal requests for stomach-pump funds. The Emerald, of course, cannot afford such an extravagance, and so it is assumed our writers are still there, slowly digesting their "ultra ultra-rich" Original Pancake House breakfasts.

Standing in line on a hungover Sunday morn seems to be the normal state of affairs at the Original Pancake House, 659 E. Broadway. Not only for Gaib and I but everyone else in line too. The line seems to start forming sometime after ten in the morning; before that you can waltz right in. But it's only that way on Sundays, our waitress assured us.

The thing to do here, of course, is to order pancakes. They have eggs and all that, but that would be like ordering a mountain-goat hamburger at a seafood restaurant specializing in deep-sea squidcakes. Confronted with a choice of pancakes from nearly every nation in the NATO scheme of things, Gaib, thinking of the lovely ladies of Sweden, ordered Swedish pancakes. I, having once studied le francais decided to try the French pancakes.

Our waitress, extremely prompt, kept our coffee cups filled to the brim while we waited. And our hearts fluttered almost out of control from the potent brew, for not only do they make a good, strong cup of coffee, but they give you real whipping creme to add to the fun. Mighty tasty stuff, but Lawd have mussy! — that stuff is powerful!

The pancakes from France, fueled with a Triple Sec topping, landed on our table first. $3.00 for three "delicate" pancakes seemed, for the moment, an outrage. Not to be outdone, the Swedes arrived and asked $3.25 for three equally thin pancakes, their's being topped with Lingonberry Butter.

Digging in, we soon found a single bite to be richer than most industrialized nations. For the life of us, we could not finish. Though the first few bites were ecstatically tasty — a bit sweet for our likes — by the time the end rolled around we felt stuffed like clay pigeons.

Like the night before, we had overdone it. If there ever is a "next time" we're going to split an order of Clam pancakes.
