Art expert will discuss jade carving

An expert in the study of Chinese jade will speak on "Imitation, Invention and Nature in Archaic Chinese Jade" tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Room 107 Lawrence Hall.

William Trousdale's slide show presentation will concern jade carving dated to the second century B.C. Among the topics he is expected to discuss are the sources of jade motifs and their basis in nature.

Trousdale, an anthropologist at the Smithsonian Institution, is a graduate of the University of Michigan. He previously lectured at the University several times during the 1970s as a visiting Maude Kerns distinguished professor of Oriental art.
