Malheur director speaks

Oregon's high desert country will be the subject of a talk by the director of the Malheur Environmental Field Station in eastern Oregon tonight at 7 p.m. in Room 16 Science I.

Denzel Ferguson will discuss the station's 11th annual summer program of field study in biology, ecology, geology, archaeology and photography.

"This program will give students as well as travelers simply interested in visiting the station a good preview of the area," says Gordon Murphy, administrative assistant in the University biology department.
