Bartlett ends tennis tourney as co-champ

With the weather forcing the tournament to be rained out in its final day, Oregon freshman Lindsay Bartlett ended up as co-champion in the Sacramento State women's tennis invitational.

Bartlett, who defeated top-seeded Carol Bowers of Santa Clara, 4-6, 7-6, 6-3, to advance to the finals, would have faced Julie Rose of San Jose State Sunday, if the weather had cooperated.

Gym teams earn season marks

Sara Gustafson earned Oregon's highest individual mark, claiming fourth in the floor exercise against top-ranked Utah.

Women set school record against Utah

Oregon's women's gymnastics team set a scoring record in a losing cause Saturday as the Ducks dropped a 148.65-140.10 decision to number-one-ranked University of Utah.

The old mark was 139.85, set last year against Oregon State.

In the other half of the coed meet, the men's team tied its season-high total of 276.75 as it buried Portland State, which earned 223.85 points.

Sara Gustafson was the top performer for the Duck women, scoring 35.6 in the all-around to finish in a tie for fifth with Utah's Andra Turner. Gustafson also took fourth in the floor exercise (9.25) and tied for sixth in the beam and vault.

In the men's competition, Alex Schwartz and Tim Darling each set school records in individual events. Schwartz was awarded a 9.85 in the rings to set an Oregon record.

Darling's 9.65 on the parallel bars broke the 9.55 mark set by Miki Moyal in 1980.

Elly Crumley led Oregon's domination of the Vikings with wins in the pommel horse (9.25), high bar (9.65) and all-around (55.45). Oregon performers won every event, while the highest finish for a Viking was fourth.
