

Selection process begins for new A.D.

University Vice Pres. Ray Hawk is expected to announce today the members of the committee that will oversee selection of a new athletic director.

The committee then will spend the next three to four months choosing a successor to Athletic Director John Caine, who resigned March 23, said Hawk, University vice president for administration and finance.

"We hope to have someone in the drivers seat by Sept. 1," Hawk said Monday.

Caine, who has been athletic director at the University for the past five years, said his resignation was prompted by the athletic department's current financial crisis. The AD's 1980-81 deficit is currently estimated to be $600,000.

"Essentially, the University decided they would like to have someone else guide this program," said Caine after announcing his resignation. "They are sensitive to the fact that we have a budget deficit, and most things do revolve around money."

Caine's resignation will become effective Wednesday, exactly five years after he assumed the position.

Deputy Athletic Director Julie Carson also announced her resignation, which will be effective today, during spring break. She will assume a faculty position in the English department Wednesday.

"The University administration is considering possible realignments of responsibilities in the athletic administration," Carson said March 18. "We've all thought of the deputy director position as an experiment, and I want to allow the University a free hand in considering a new administrative structure."

Carson was second in command to Caine and responsible for women's athletics.

The committee to select a successor to Caine will be composed of about 12 people, said Hawk, who added he had filled 10 spots by Monday evening.

During the interim, a three-member management team will share the duties of the athletic director.

The three associate athletic directors — James Ferguson, Chris Voelz and Herb Yamana — will assume their new duties Wednesday.

Ferguson will be responsible for the men's athletic programs and for support services, including sports medicine and equipment.

Voelz will be responsible for the women's program, sports information and academic counseling.

Yamana will be responsible for facilities, promotion and events management.

Administration reviews ailing athletic department

After reviewing the recommendation from the Intercollegiate Athletic Committee, the University administration has decided to do some probing on its own.

The IAC presented Acting Pres. Paul Olum with its recommendation March 18. Five committee members opposed eliminating any sports to help solve the athletic department's budget deficit. The other four members suggested cutting either the men's and women's gymnastics teams or both gymnastics and men's and women's swimming.

However, according to University Vice Pres. Ray Hawk, there was "not enough solid fiscal information to make a decision."

"Within a week we hope to have a better grasp of the situation," Hawk said, adding his hope that the administration can make its final decision before the national letter of intent deadline of April 8.

The five IAC members opposing program cuts said in a joint statement that the University should "set aside for the present the athletic department proposal to eliminate gymnastics and swimming."

"The University should eliminate sports only as a last resort, and the case has not yet been made either that such drastic action is necessary or that men's and women's gymnastics and swimming are the most appropriate choices for elimination."
