

Cord-ially yours, E.J.

Police are investigating reports that the tree that crushed law school dean Derrick Bell's car last night was taken from a nearby Errant Jones lumberyard.

Jones earlier threatened to clear-cut the University grounds if the University's Environmental Law Clinic continued to oppose his efforts to have a radioactive lumber waste facility built in the West University Neighborhood.

Contacted by the Immorald, Jones said, "Give me a fucking break."

Immorald photo

IFC funds new campus prostitutes union

By TALL PELLETS
Of the Immorald

University students will have in-house prostitutes for the first time next year, the Incredible Fools Committee decided Tuesday night.

Committee members voted 5-1 to give the new Prostitutes Union $25,890 for the 1981-82 year. Susan Harrass abstained from the vote when she ran screaming from the room.

Although Muley Trail, the lone dissenting member, questioned the appropriation on moral grounds, other committee members seemed more interested in the whores' practical value to lonely students.

"This makes me want to stay in law school another year," said IFC chairer Yawn Needstotalk, licking the hair from his palms. "I just hope my wife doesn't find out."

A PU spokeswoman, who would identify herself only as the "Sappy Hooker," defended the group as a cultural endeavor. She said the union would raise most of its own funds, becoming less of a drain on incidental fee funds as it develops.

She also asked for EMU office space. Committee member Bitchard Bombast suggested that enough "office space" could be made available by converting the Immorald suite into a brothel, but committee members who have continuing political ambitions rejected the notion.

In other business, committee members stuck their tongues out to the Rendering Education Substantially Trivial program.

Representatives of REST, which has been holding organizational meetings once a week for the past ten years without getting anything started, said the program needs the money in order to continue getting meaningless, "RESTful" credits for students.

"Students need some nonsensical credits in order to survive," the representatives said. "Give them a fucking break."

However, the committee said the group would duplicate the services of several other campus groups and denied the request.

The REST representatives promised to come back next year with an offer of meaningless credits for committee members.

Childcare center bans leg-hold traps

By ANN SINKHOLE
Of the Immorald

Charging the EMU childcare coordinator with using "barbaric, inhumane methods of discipline," the 11-member Parent Advisory Committee voted Friday to ban leg-hold traps from both the EMU Childcare Center and Child Care and Development Center.

"This was an issue we could really sink our teeth into," said parent Lila Brown. "They're maiming our cute, cuddly little kids."

Yawn Needstotalk, the student-government representative on the advisory committee, said he has studied the problem carefully and can fully understand the position of the parents.

"There's no doubt in my mind that I understand what the parents said," Needstotalk said.

Childcare coordinator Ricky Kitty denied the parents' allegations.

"There is no mistreatment of children at either of my centers," she said. "The traps are checked every hour."

Arguing to retain the traps, Kitty cited statistics showing that 97 percent of the children caught by the traps suffered no permanent disability.

Kitty said the traps were adopted after a lengthy study by her staff revealed that traps are the most cost-effective, progressive method of childcare available.

"Drugs are far too expensive, and produce side-effects that last after the children go home," she said. "The parents complain."

Needstotalk said the staff's study does indeed indicate the viability of using leg-hold traps.

"I sincerely believe that's what the study does show," he said.

Presenting the request to the EMU Board, Brown requested the ban take effect some time during spring term.

During discussion of the request, EMU Board member Job Hoots rapped the table and asked, "What's all this I hear about lego blocks?" Informed that the discussion centered around leg-hold traps, not lego blocks, Hoots said, "Oh. I'm sorry. Never mind."

The board postponed a decision on the issue, directing the parents to suggest an alternative form of control.

"We don't want to make any snap judgments on such a touchy issue," said board chairer Greg Rutting.

Commending the board for postponing the decision, Needstotalk said deciding to postpone the decision was probably a good decision.

"I will certainly abide by the EMU Board's decision, because I just voted for it," he said.

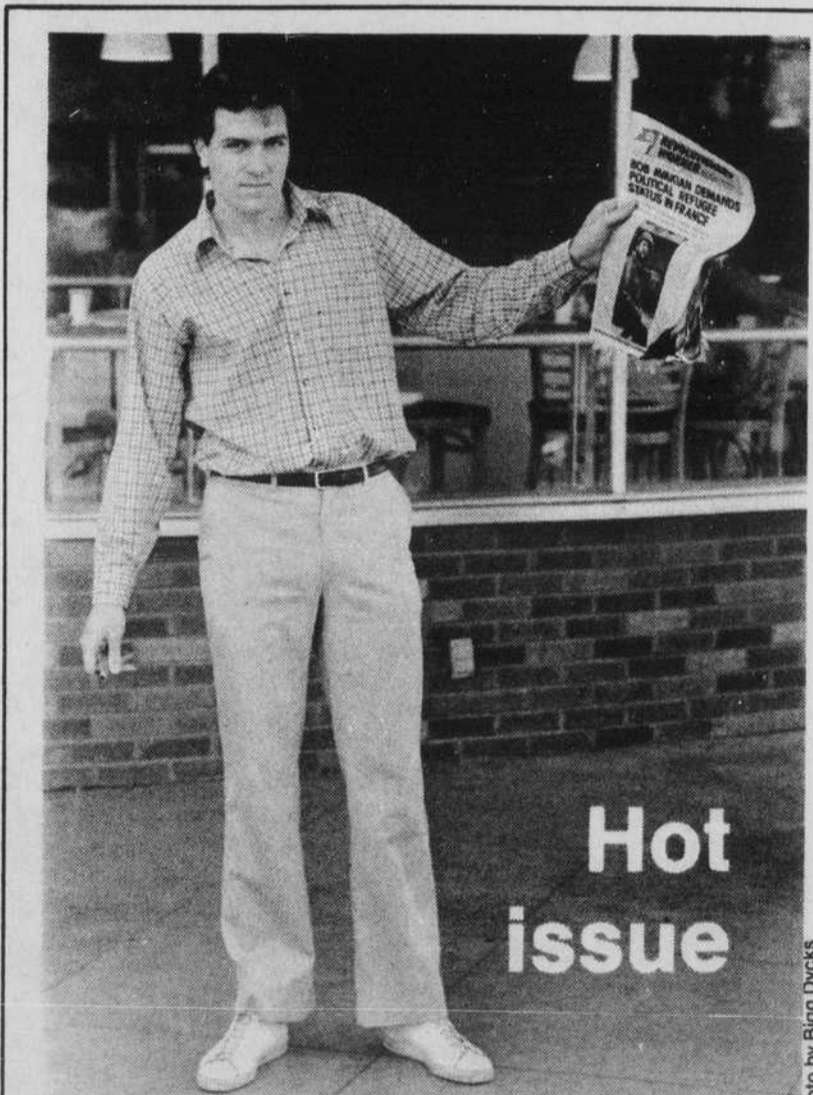

Satire writers give up, refuse to fill this space

Immorald writers gave up Tuesday night, deciding there is "no way in hell" they can fill this four-inch hole with something funny.

"I'm burned out," said associate editor Tall Pellets. "I've spent three days in a row editing this rag, and I've wrung my mind of wit."

Coordinator Mike Leech admitted that using this story was "a cop-out," but said "Give me a fucking break" just to get in one more dig at legislator Max Lichen.

The other associate editor, Mi Krust, was in Coos Bay and unavailable for comment.

Hot
issue

Photo by Bigg Dycks

"Everything from Cheerios to high interest rates is a communist plot," Joe Vinist, of the Reactionary Capitalist Youth Brigade, shouted as he burned a copy of the Revolutionary Communist Party's "Revolutionary Worker" newspaper on the EMU Terrace Tuesday afternoon. Vinist said the burning was a protest of the arrest of him and three other RCYB members on arson charges stemming from an alleged attempt to burn a sociology professor in the EMU Ballroom during a radical teach-in.

...and to think we met through an ad in the Immorald
Personals

Spring Geek Rush

Begins Friday —
Bring your chickens!

Sponsored by the
Interred Fraternity Council

If you can read this you're too close

Open 7 Nites

KINKY'S

$4

Self Service

COPULATES

- Furry animals
- Brass doorknobs
- Football players

345-8996 96 N. 96th