Boxing great Joe Louis, 66, dies of heart attack

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Former heavyweight boxing champion Joe Louis, who held the title for almost 12 years and ranked as one of history's greatest fighters, died Sunday at the age of 66.

"He was in a cardiac arrest state when he arrived," said nursing supervisor Shirley Brown at Desert Springs Hospital. "They did everything they could to revive him." Brown said Louis died at 10:05 a.m.

Louis, confined to a wheelchair since heart surgery in 1977, attended the Larry Holmes-Trevor Berbick heavyweight title fight Saturday night at Caesars Palace.

Called the Brown Bomber for his punch and string of knockout victories, Louis was just 23 when he won the title by knocking out 31-year-old James Braddock in the eighth round at Chicago in 1937.

He had a 35-1 record, including 31 knockouts, at the time he won the heavyweight title. His 11 years and eight months as titleholder was the longest continuous reign in heavyweight title history.

Louis fought 27 championship bouts, including a record 25 defenses without a loss after he took the title.

The most famous part of the Louis legend was the two championship fights against Max Schmeling. Schmeling won the first bout in 1936, but Louis won the 1938 rematch.

"Joe was a boxing genius," said Schmeling, 75, who lives in Hamburg, West Germany. He called Louis "the kind that only comes, at most, one time in a generation. He was the greatest opponent I ever faced in the ring."

Net squads post losses in weekend matches

Christi Dorsey of the University of Washington handed Oregon's Lindsay Bartlett her first conference loss of the year to spark the Huskies to a 9-0 victory over the Ducks Saturday.

Dorsey beat Bartlett, 6-4, 2-6, 6-3, in the top singles event and later teamed with Terri Agee to win their doubles match. The Duck women are now 8-2 for the season.

The Oregon men lost two matches to the University of Idaho, 5-4, and Washington, 9-0, this weekend. The Ducks' record is now 10-3.

The men will host Pacific Lutheran Friday at 2:30 p.m.

Next action for the Duck women will be Tuesday morning when they host Oregon State at 10 a.m. Both matches will be held at the Alder Street courts.

Soccer squad takes seventh

Oregon's women's soccer team won one of three matches to take seventh place at the Westmont Invitational last weekend in Santa Barbara, Calif.

The Ducks dropped decisions Friday to Stanford, 1-0, and UC-Santa Barbara, 2-1. Stanford scored its goal with only 30 seconds remaining in the game. Oregon outshot the Cardinals 12-2.

Oregon finished the tour-namment Saturday with a 9-0 whitewash of tournament host Westmont. Striker Felicity Mithen and halfback Iris Simmons scored two goals apiece for the Ducks.

The Ducks were without the services of all-American Michelle Potestio who has been sidelined due to injuries.

Oregon's next competition will be May 16-17 at the Stanford Invitational at Palo Alto, Calif.
