

Octogenarian, visiting prof exhibit paintings in museum

Two oil painters will have their work featured in a show that opens Sunday, April 26, in the Museum of Art.

Paintings of Oregon's people and places by Charles Heaney, 84, will be displayed in the museum's first floor gallery through May 17. Heaney's admirers are frequently of an older generation that relates to the western locations Heaney paints — Black Butte, Tonopah, The Dalles, the Columbia Gorge and the small mining camps and towns of Oregon and Nevada.

Heaney began painting the Oregon landscape in 1929. He became especially fascinated with the John Day country. In 1932, he had his first one-man show at the Museum of Art. Most recently, he was invited to exhibit in the governor's office in Salem.

Large-scale abstract painting by visiting art. Prof. Gary Komarin also will be featured through May 17 in the first floor gallery.

"I am interested in color as light — in paint as the vehicle for achieving the unknown," Komarin says. "My work is involved with landscape in so far as landscape implies space, and the juxtaposition of relatively flat areas of color."

In the Photography of Oregon gallery, works by Los Angeles artist Robert Heinecken will be on display through May 17. Heinecken is a photography instructor at UCLA.

Heinecken's photographs of television images, known as videograms, have won major awards throughout the United States. More than 25 16 by 20-inch color videograms will be exhibited in this, his second American showing.

The museum is open from noon to 5 p.m. daily except Monday. For more information call 686-3027.
