Session planning begins

Volunteers are needed to staff committees charged with organizing the Fourth Annual Conference of the Willamette Valley Racial Minorities Consortium, scheduled for Nov. 13 and 14 at the University.

The conference theme is "Issues of the 80s: Minority Concerns in a Conservative Era."

Held annually at a Willamette Valley college or university, the conference is an opportunity for all interested in minority affairs to discuss a broad range of racial minority issues and concerns, says Colleen Fong, University equal education specialist and one of the conference's planners. This year, the conference will be held in conjunction with a statewide Asian American student conference and meetings of other minority student groups.

Suggested topics for the conference include racism and sexism, minorities and health care, racial harassment in the 80s, rebuilding the student movement in the 80s and minority student recruitment and retention.

A meeting will be held today from 12-2 p.m. in the EMU, room to be posted.

This Tuesday, May 12
Dr. Lawrence Al Siebert
7:00 p.m.
at the UO Ballroom
Tickets at the door
$4 gen./$2 students

Dr. Siebert is a free lance psychologist, lecturer, writer, and consultant, and has conducted many management workshops for Division of Continuing Education and Business Administration. He has been the director of staff development for many businesses, and is the author of articles on "Survival Personality". His presentation is practical and exciting, and the topics will cover positive attitudes, confronting conflict in business, how to maintain a positive attitude in a negative situation, and how to turn conflict into opportunity. If Siebert is out of step with his colleagues, who spend time looking for what's wrong with people, it's because of his belief that "creative" thinking can turn any situation into an opportunity."
