

Registrar announces enrollment increase

University enrollment increased slightly this term from the same time last year, according to statistics released recently compiled by the registrar's office.

Excluding more than 600 community education students, 15,439 undergraduate and graduate students were attending classes as of April 24.

The report also indicates that Oregon residents outnumber non-residents about four-to-one on campus — 12,103 to 3,367.

"Non-residents will probably decrease as tuition continues to go up," predicts a registrar's office statistician.

According to the report, approximately 8,100 men are enrolled compared to about 7,500 women.

"The men have always outnumbered the women," the statistician says. "But the gap is narrowing. What used to be several thousand is now just a few hundred."

However, there are more women than men in some University departments and schools — the education school for instance.

Other statistics mark a small increase in the number of graduate students from 2,911 last spring term to 2,957 this spring.

A breakdown of the enrollment figures indicates that freshman through senior classes all gained in enrollment. The senior class posted the largest increase with a gain of more than 200 students.

Seniors are the largest class this term with 3,765 students.

The number of community education students has more than doubled to 612 this term.
