

Committee marks possible University cuts

SALEM — It's pretty much all over but the crying for higher education in the Legislature, according to the chairer of the Joint Ways and Means education subcommittee.

Sen. Jim Gardner, D-Portland, says his panel has made nearly all of the decisions about higher education funding for the 1981-83 biennium. The subcommittee has spent the last month targeting possible budget cuts in case Gov. Vic

Atiyeh's revenue proposals are rejected by the Legislature.

For the first year of the biennium, the Legislature is setting specific priorities on where the budget ax should fall. As Gardner explains it, these priorities are designed to give Chancellor Roy Lieuallen and the state higher education board some breathing room.

At its Tuesday meeting, the subcommittee approved a 21-item list that ranks the cuts to be made depending on how many dollars must be carved out of Atiyeh's proposed budget. The list assumes a 17 to 17.5-percent tuition increase for resident undergraduates. The sixth item on the list would bump that to 25 percent at the medical, dental and veterinary schools.

Number five calls for the cutoff of state support for intercollegiate athletics at both the universities and colleges, a move that Gardner admits is likely to kill the programs at the regional colleges.

Sixteenth on the list is ending state support for most physical education courses at the institutions. This item is one of the most controversial because Lieuallen and the state board contend it is an impermissible intrusion by the Legislature into decisions on what classes will be taught, Gardner says.

There's a rumor you've given up your sheep skins. And have learned to drive a clutch. You've given "Ted" his place on the floor. To snuggle with me. And such. The past year has been "Awesome". Nights of wine, walks, and song. There was even the night we ate possum. And the summer that seemed too long. But now the year has gone by. And yes, we are still very young. To today I give a sigh. And pray for tomorrow '82 to soon come. Happy 1 year. LOVA-M 5-27
