Saturday Market, Fifth Street offer bazaar, rustic shopping

By DAVID MURPHY
Of the Emerald

During the week it's a parking lot — but come Saturday the lot at the corner of Eighth Avenue and Oak Street is transformed.

Hundreds of people each weekend throng to the Saturday Market — an all-day festival that is Eugene's permanent crafts fair.

The market, which runs from early spring through Christmas, has become one of the city's "sights to see."

Dozens of local craftspeople sell handwrought jewelry and leather work, pottery, clothing and stained glass from individually designed booths.

An area crowded with food vendors offers such treats as potato knisch, shrimp eggrolls and tofu carob pie.

Market visitors can sit back and sample wares while listening to homegrown bluegrass or rhythm and blues that is performed on stage throughout the day in the entertainment area.

In fact, the entire market is one big entertainment area.

Kids with masks and circus makeup, jugglers, mimes and hackysack players combine to create a mixture of small-town carnival and big-city bazaar.

Don't plan just a short visit to the Saturday Market — be prepared to spend the whole day.

During the rest of the week, the same kind of excitement and charm is captured at the Fifth Street Public Market, which sprawls over an entire block of renovated warehouses on 5th Avenue between High and Pearl streets.

The converted buildings house 10 restaurants — everything from French to Mexican to Chinese and Greek cooking — that cater to snackers, shoppers and downtown lunchers.

In the basement of the former chicken processing plant are retail stores that include a bakery, a produce mart, and fish, wine and cheese shops.

Saturday Market booths like this one have drawn weekend shoppers for more than 10 years.

The Fifth Street Market has just completed a new section that manager Polly Nelson says will feature an open courtyard with outdoor seating, trees and live jazz and classical music on Sunday afternoons.

The crowded yet congenial market has been done in a contemporary urban chic, but still retains the atmosphere of a cozy, almost intimate, neighborhood gathering place.

The Fifth Street Market is open daily from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

CAMPUS COURT QUADS

Where the living is easy

Easy on the spirit

Nothing could be easier on the spirit than living across the street from campus in the Campus Court Quads. The time you save in making it to class means more time for sleep and other activities.

And quad living gives you plenty of opportunity for both privacy and socializing. A quad consists of four private bedrooms and a shared kitchen and bath/shower area. You can choose from three bedroom sizes, ranging from 150 to 210 square feet. Each bedroom has its own sink, toilet, refrigerator, and separate outside entrance and can be locked to both the outside and the rest of the quad. The furnishings are comfortable and attractive—as pleasant as home—and the large cheerful rooms make it easy to entertain your friends.

Everything you need for easy living is here.

Easy on your budget

Compare your cost of living here with other apartments, quads or dorms. You'll discover you get more for your money at the Campus Court Quads! By doing your own cooking, you can manage your budget better, and the cost of your housing per square foot makes the living easy. Choose one of our three bedroom sizes:

Summer rates (6/16-8/31)

Standard $110; medium $115; large $120

There is a $75 security deposit, all of which may be refunded when you move out if all conditions of the rental agreement are met. There are no hidden charges.

The Campus Court Quads have 12 large, 24 medium, and 68 standard-size bedrooms, so reserve early to get your choice.

Compare these advantages for summer term and the rest of the year.
