

Rick Bay

University tabs athletic director

Richard Bay, currently executive director of the University of Michigan's alumni association, will become the University's intercollegiate athletics director on Aug. 1.

Bay's appointment, announced June 16 by Ray Hawk, University vice-president for administration and finance, was the result of a three-month search that included more than 55 candidates. Bay replaces athletic director John Caine, who resigned March 23 after being told by the University administration he no longer would be athletic director.

Curt Simic, vice-president for public services, says administrators selected Bay for his ability to direct the University's athletic future.

"Rick Bay will relate to the off-campus groups of University alumni and friends in a way that will create understanding, inspire confidence and generate support," Simic says. "He understands public relations and fund raising, and both are essential elements of a successful athletic program."

Bay, 38, has worked as alumni director for seven years. He previously had been head wrestling coach, director of academic counseling and assistant professor of physical education at the University of Michigan.

Bay earned his bachelor's degree from Michigan in 1965, majoring in speech and English. He was named the Big 10 Conference's outstanding wrestler in 1965 and the National Collegiate Athletic Association wrestling coach of the year in 1974.

A former Boston marathoner who finished in the top 15 percent of the 1979 race, Bay has traveled to more than 35 countries on behalf of the University of Michigan and amateur sports associations.

"Rick Bay is a principled person — not a man of expediency but one who does what he knows is right," Hawk says. "He is a strong supporter of both men's and women's athletics, and I truly feel we will have one athletic department under Rick Bay, not two."
