

Fast recalls first atomic holocaust

Four-day event reminds residents of blast victims, sheds light on current hazards

By HEIDI SWILLINGER

Between 50 and 100 Eugene residents will commemorate the Hiroshima-Nagasaki bombings with a four-day fast this week, says organizer Dorothy Granada.

The purpose of the fast is to remember victims of the first nuclear holocaust, Granada says.

In addition, "we want to educate people about the escalating nuclear arms race," she says.

Granada, a staff member of First Step, the Eugene chapter of the Non-Violent Tactics Development Project, contends that "we are daily being brought much closer to a bigger holocaust" than occurred at Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Granada says organizers are hoping to motivate people to call for a nuclear arms freeze between the United States and the Soviet Union.

"We need a freeze before the first-strike weapons are in place," Granada says, adding that the "first-strike" MX, Trident and cruise missiles are classified as offensive rather than retaliatory weapons.

"They're no good as defensive weapons. They're to be used in an offensive war."

According to Granada, a weapons' freeze is "essential" within the next three years, because after that time "it will be extremely difficult, if not impossible, to verify if the other side is complying with the freeze," because the cruise missiles are small enough to be "hidden anywhere — haystacks, barns, tractors or trucks."

This will be the second year Eugene has participated in the commemoration, but Granada says it has been held around the country since 1945.

The international fast will be observed in France, Germany, Britain and Japan, as well as more than 150 communities in the United States, Granada says.

Those attempting the fast should be in good health, she says, and fasters should drink plenty of the purest water available.

Granada advises fasters to relieve themselves of as much stress as possible, and she suggests taking time off from work or finding a friend to take care of children and meal responsibilities.

The commemoration starts at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday with a common meal for fasters and supporters. The fast begins on Thursday and will end Sunday with a candlelight walk to Alton Baker Park.

A number of workshops, films and discussions will be held during the four-day period. Childcare will be provided for some of the activities.

The event is sponsored by Citizen Action For Lasting Security, Clergy and Laity Concerned, First Step and New Call to Peacemaking.

"CADDIE" A TRUE STORY

Eugene premieres the latest in the truly amazing line of new films from Australia. The winner of four Aussie Academy Awards, "Caddie" chronicles the tribulations of a young woman who along with her two children has been abandoned by her husband just as the Great Depression hits Australia. Armed with absolutely no job skills, she sets out on an incredible saga of survival. In what could have been a very maudlin film, "Caddie" manages to rise above the ordinary and emerge as a truly remarkable work.

ANDREI ROUBLEV

By popular request, the epic of 15th century Russia, recently restored to its full length, explores the world and art of Roublev the famed icon painter. Censored and criticized at home for its harsh look at medieval Russia, it nonetheless is one of the genuine masterpieces of the Soviet cinema.
