The Pioneer came to the University in 1910, modeled after an eastern Oregon trapper that sculptor A. Phimister Proctor happened upon at a Burns, Ore. ranch. The Pioneer and the Pioneer Mother are situated so they gaze at each other across 13th Avenue. When Johnson Hall was built, windows were placed so their view was unimpaird.

dividual psychotherapy, marital counseling and emergency counseling to students at no charge.

The center has on hand two psychiatrists trained to handle depression, anxiety, or any other student emotional problem.

The women's clinic, staffed with a full-time nurse practitioner and a consulting gynecologist, provides breast and pelvic exams, pap smears and the treatment of sexually transmitted diseases and other gynecological problems.

The clinic also distributes all forms of birth control and provides family planning information.

The center's infirmary was closed at the end of spring term because of a lack of use by University students, caused by a shift toward heavier use of the out-patient services offered by the center.

Jackson emphasizes that almost all services offered by the health center are free to any student, and that any charges made for tests, X-rays and medications generally are at least 20 percent less than elsewhere.

"Our pharmacy has most of the medicines that a student needs," Jackson says.

Many students mistakenly believe that they need ASUO health insurance to use the health center, he says. Insurance is quite a help for paying for "those devastating things that can happen," but paying fees is the only prerequisite for using the center.

Although the center has walk-in service, Jackson requests that students call 686-4441 for appointments. All treatments are confidential, he says.

Clinic hours will be Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and 8 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. Saturday.

Urgent care will be provided during regular school terms Monday through Saturday, 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. and 12 p.m. to 8 p.m. Sunday.
