Sony's Walkman

WM-2 Super-Compact Stereo Cassette Player
The Walkman is incredible.

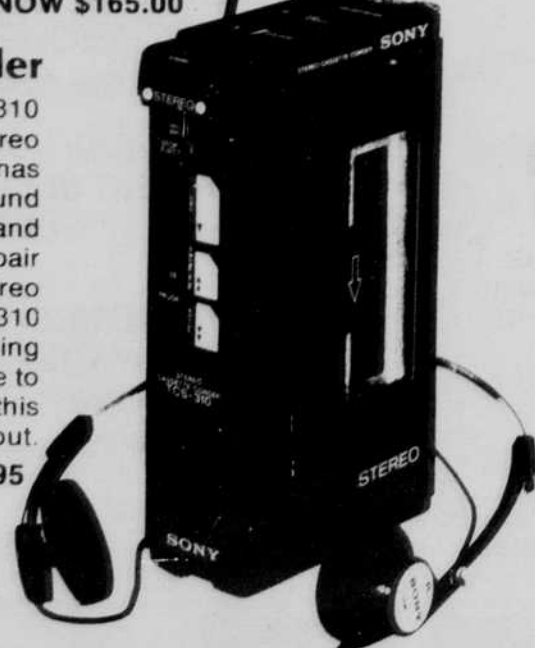

The Walkman is so compact, it's scarcely larger than the stereo cassette that fits inside. For sound quality, Sony offers the featherweight MDR-4LIS stereo headphones. Soft-Touch controls give you instant access to the music. The Walkman had metal tape capability, counter-inertial flywheel system, and a headphone mute switch to let you in on the world outside. Take the Walkman along. The Walkman operates on two AA-size alkaline batteries.

Two selected to seek funds

The University graduate school has appointed two people to assist university faculty members and graduate students in finding ever-more-elusive research funds.

Charlene Curry and Camilla Bayliss were chosen as research information officers, according to graduate school dean Richard Hersh, from "an unusually high number of qualified applicants." The two women, each on a half-time appointment, replace Fran Barkan, who left July 1 for a new position.

Curry and Bayliss will help any researcher find whatever funds are available and show them how to apply for them. According to Hersh, they plan to place more emphasis on a broader range of funding opportunities. "It's important for us to look to different sources for funding," Hersh says, citing corporations and foundations as examples.

Both have experience writing grant proposals and administering grant funds.

Curry was legislative assistant to Sen. Ed Fadeley, D-Eugene, during the last three legislative sessions. She has taught at the College of Education at various times during the last 10 years, and currently is vice chair of the LCC Board. Her concentration will be on federal relations and on funding from governmental agencies.

Bayliss, a doctoral candidate in educational psychology who has been a consultant to educational organizations, plans to concentrate on the different foundations and corporations which grant funds.

Both are available in the graduate school at 125 Chapman, to help faculty and graduate students.
