Reagan arrives at 22-nation summit

CANCUN, Mexico

Pres. Reagan arrived in Mexico on Wednesday for the first summit of 22 rich and poor nations, saying the road to prosperity for the hungry and impoverished nations of the Third World is lighted by private enterprise, not major foreign aid.

As he stepped from Air Force One, Reagan was embraced by Mexican Pres. Jose Lopez Portillo and accepted a 21-gun salute before he and his host went into a private meeting at the airport.

The formal sessions begin Thursday.

As he left the White House Wednesday morning, Reagan said he may have been too harsh last week when he said he would be entering a "hostile atmosphere" at Cancun.

"We go to Cancun with no illusions," Reagan said in a brief departure statement. "The problems of hunger and poverty are severe and deeply rooted. They cannot be solved overnight. Nor can massive transfers of wealth somehow miraculously produce new well-being.

"Our message in Cancun will be clear: The road to prosperity and human fulfillment is lighted by economic freedom and individual incentive."

He promised continued U.S. support to help "free people build free markets" in the Third World.

Delegate knocks U.S. grain sales

WASHINGTON

Pres. Reagan's decision to step up grain sales to the Soviet Union undercuts U.S. efforts to gain concessions on human rights and military cooperation in Europe, the chief U.S. delegate to the Helsinki review conference said today.

"The Soviet Union, in my opinion, is a social and economic failure, only a military success," Ambassador Max Kampelman told reporters. "I am very reluctant for the administration to take steps strengthening an area where they are weak."

Representatives of 33 European nations, the United States and Canada are reviewing compliance with the 1975 agreement they signed in Helsinki to lessen East-West tensions and further human rights.

After 14 months of rancorous debate, Kampelman said the Soviets have tentatively agreed to a number of provisions for a declaration winding up the conference. These, he said, include a specific reference to human rights, which the Soviets blocked at a similar conference in 1977 in Belgrade, Yugoslavia.

State loses more money

SALEM

The state's battered general fund suffered another blow Wednesday when officials learned $2 million will have to be found to implement a 1979 arbitrator's award to prison employees.

Gov. Vic Atiyeh said the Oregon Daily Emerald legislative Emergency Board would be asked to take the $2 million out of a $20 million fund set aside for all state emergencies this biennium.

Atiyeh said that means less money left for other agency crises and "it's hard to speculate on the effect."

The Oregon Supreme Court decided Tuesday not to hear the state's appeal of a May Court of Appeals ruling which upheld the 1979 arbitrator's award to employees at the Oregon State Penitentiary and Oregon Women's Correctional Center.

Ultrasound offers easier examination

NEW YORK

Dramatic improvements in the use of ultrasound are making it possible to examine a fetus almost as easily as a newborn baby, but some doctors are making wrong diagnoses because they are unfamiliar with the technique, a researcher said Wednesday.

Dr. Jason Birnholz, a radiologist at the Harvard

Medical School, said every pregnant woman should be given an ultrasound examination, because it is safe and inexpensive and because it can discover problems that don't show up in any other test.

But he cautioned that some doctors now giving ultrasound exams do not know how to interpret the test, and that they are missing problems that an expert would find.

Coast Guard allows tankers

SEATTLE

The Coast Guard apparently will recommend that oil super-tankers be allowed on Western Washington's inland waters, members of Washington state's congressional delegation announced Wednesday.

The Coast Guard plans to publish in Thursday's Federal Register a notice indicating its suggestion that the Department of Transportation revise the current 125,000-deadweight ton limit on tankers in the area, Sen. Henry Jackson said.
