Hewlett-Packard hosts faculty

Some University business administration faculty will be the guests of honor at a unique one-on-one contact visit with representatives of Hewlett-Packard at the firm's Corvallis office next week.

Hewlett-Packard is playing host to the business faculty members in an effort to gain first-hand knowledge of University business programs.

Officials of the firm say they are considering channeling business graduates into Hewlett-Packard to fill specialized needs. In turn, business faculty members will hold discussion sessions with representatives of the firm on Nov. 20.

The visit marks the beginning of formal efforts by Hewlett-Packard and the business school to establish a comprehensive rapport, says Barbara Kenyon, administrative services director at the business school.

The faculty is "committed to promoting a community alliance," Kenyon says.

"I think the visit is of particular importance because Hewlett-Packard is such a large firm and they're really going out of their way to establish good relations with the business school."
