

Cuba to take on Duck women

The Oregon women's basketball team gets a taste of international competition tonight when the Cuba National team brings its talents to McArthur Court, officially opening the Duck's season in an 8 p.m. game.

The Ducks are the Cubans' final stop on an eight-game national tour that has seen them struggle to a 3-4 record, which is a surprise to many experts who rank them among the world's best teams.

"I think they are probably the third or fourth best team in the world," says Oregon coach Elwin Heiny. "But they appear to be either up or down, on or off. This is a team that has failed to get past the first round in the World University games."

Close scores have been the rule for the Cubans on their tour of the nation's top college powers.

Old Dominion (71-68), last year's third-place finisher in the national championships, UCLA (85-72) and San Diego State (72-60) have been Cuba's wins on the tour.

The defeats have been to such powers as national champion

Louisiana Tech (87-66), Texas (67-61), Stephen F. Austin (86-85), and North Carolina State (77-75).

The key to controlling the game could be keeping the Cuban offense outside says Bev Smith is no stranger to the Cubans, having played against them the past four years with Canadian national teams.
