El Salvador: The People Will Win
Shot clandestinely, this award-winning documentary traces 500 years of Salvadorean history, from Spanish conquest to the current struggle for peace and justice. "It is a film of imagery... We are shown the people's view of their country, their oppression, and their struggle. And at the end we are given something to take away with us. Their hope." John Conner.

HEART TO HEART
Some French films shine because of their light, low keyed and humorous depiction of life in France. Heart to Heart is such a film. Heart captures the essence of middle class life as it follows one French family over a period of about a dozen years.

ORDINARY PEOPLE
We've come a long way, baby - how long ago could a movie have endorsed the break-up of a nuclear family and gotten an Oscar for it? This is definitely a post-Seventies testimony to the virtues of psychotherapy, but it is also a wrenching family drama, illuminated by the performances of Timothy Hutton, Mary Tyler Moore, and Elizabeth McGovern. Redford as director isn't Godard, he isn't even Mazursky, but he's put together a well-paced, moving depiction of Ordinary People with extraordinary problems. Though we said it would cost $1.50, it will only cost $1, courtesy of the Miller Brewing Company. This Friday at 7 and 9:30 pm in 150 Geology. 814.12-11
