49ers' fleet receiver sprains knee in practice

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Freddie Solomon, the San Francisco 49ers' starting wide receiver and punt returner, suffered a sprained left knee in practice Thursday, but a team spokesman said Solomon likely would play in the Super Bowl game against the Cincinnati Bengals.

Solomon, who had 59 receptions for 969 yards and a team-high eight touchdowns in 1981, collided with rookie cornerback Ronnie Lott during a passing drill and crumpled to the Silverdome's artificial turf. He was helped into the locker room, where the diagnosis of a knee sprain was made.

Solomon officially was listed as questionable for Sunday's game, and Jerry Walker, a 49ers' spokesman, said it was a 50-50 chance he would play.

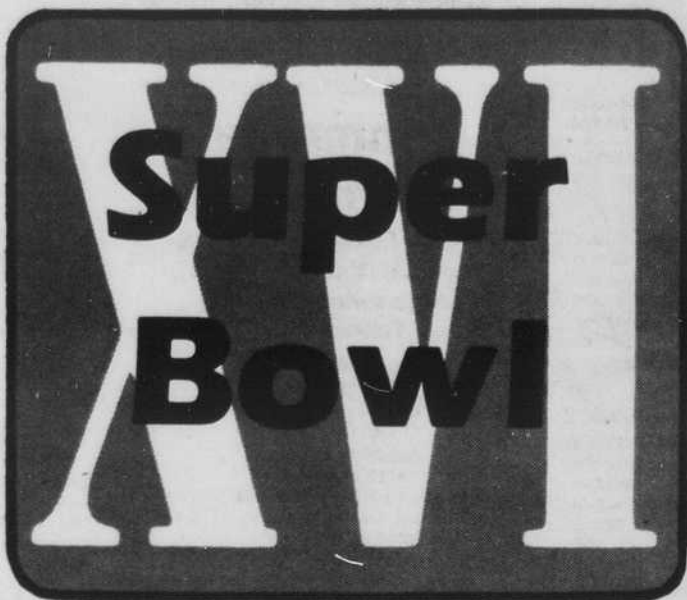

"If the game was tonight, he would not play," Walker said. But, when asked if the wide receiver would be OK by gametime Sunday, the spokesman replied: "This is the Super Bowl. He'll play."

Solomon was later spotted walking without a limp and told several reporters on an elevator, "I feel fine."

Randy Cross, one of the 49ers' starting guards, said that after the collision, Solomon had stayed on the turf for "a couple of seconds but then bounced right back up, and he looked like he was OK."

Only Dwight Clark, with 85 catches for 1,105 yards, topped Solomon among San Francisco receivers.

If Solomon cannot start against the Bengals Sunday, Mike Shumann or Mike Wilson will take his place at wide receiver. If Solomon is unable to return punts, that job will go to running back Bill Ring.

Lott, the 49ers' No.1 draft choice out of Southern California, was uninjured in the collision with Solomon.

The development came after Cincinnati Coach Forrest Gregg had criticized his counterpart with the 49ers, Bill Walsh, for saying that running back Pete Johnson will probably be the Bengals' primary weapon Sunday.

"We've got to put in two or three things to stop Pete Johnson," Walsh said at Thursday's 49ers news conference. "He ran effectively in the first game (gaining 86 yards on 12 carries in the Bengals' 21-3 loss), and there's some thought that Cincinnati might use him more."

Cincinnati's Williams says revenge a factor

TROY, Mich. (AP) — Cincinnati Bengals linebacker Reggie Williams says there's a desire for revenge smoldering beneath the kind words being traded before Super Bowl XVI.

Williams, a leader of the Bengals' defense, said he's still upset at the way San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana spiked a football in the end zone after scoring a touchdown in the 49ers' regular-season victory over Cincinnati in Riverfront Stadium.

Williams said he'll have revenge in mind when the two clubs play Sunday in the Silverdome in Pontiac, Mich.

"I can't speak for everybody, but I can recall vividly seeing Joe Montana spike the football in the end zone," Williams said Thursday.

"I don't mind a quarterback being happy that he scored a touchdown. But when he spikes a football in our face, so to speak, I'm going to remember that," Williams said. "I think I've been working on spiking quarterbacks this week."

The two teams have said few discouraging words about each other during group interviews this week with hundreds of reporters covering the Super Bowl. Williams indicated Thursday that it was time to put the niceties aside.

"I'm fired up for this game," Williams said. "Diplomacy has been played to the hilt on the part of several people in the organization."

"... There is a certain respectful communication going between both ballclubs. They are saying great things about us, and we're saying great things about them."
