Public supports sanctions, says poll

NEW YORK

A majority of Americans do not think Western Europe is doing enough to support U.S. economic sanctions imposed against the Soviet Union after martial law was declared in Poland.

The latest Associated Press-NBC News poll also said that 7 of 10 Americans believe the Soviet Union has had "a great deal of influence" in declaring and enforcing martial law in Poland, and a plurality believes the U.S. sanctions against the Soviet Union have not been strong enough.

The nationwide telephone poll of 1,597 adults was conducted Jan. 18-19 according to a scientific random sampling.

Seventy-two percent said the United States' allies in Western Europe are not doing enough to support the American sanctions, while 15 percent said they are doing enough and 13 percent were not sure.

Forty-nine percent said the economic sanctions the United States has imposed on the Soviet Union because of the events in Poland have not been strong enough. Forty-one percent said those sanctions have been about right and 10 percent said they have been too strong.

After martial law was declared in Poland on Dec. 13, Pres. Reagan announced economic sanctions against both Poland and the Soviet Union.

U.S. won't invite Polish immigrants

NEW YORK

A high U.S. official says the Reagan administration has chosen not to encourage the 50,000 Polish refugees who have flooded into Austria to come to the United States, The New York Times reported Sunday.

The unidentified official said the policy is part of an effort to encourage the loosening of martial law imposed in Poland on Dec. 13, according to the Times.

"We don't want to create the impression that the situation in Poland is irretrievable," the official said. "It is not necessary yet. There is no point in contributing one way or another to the impression that the situation has moved to a point where it is locked in ice."

But two leaders of the Polish American Congress said their requests for speeding up applications for Polish emigrants were "well received" by the Reagan administration.

State Department spokeswoman Anita Stockman said she "wasn't aware of any problems" with Polish refugees wishing to come to the U.S.

Africa and the Middle East.

"How long can this continue?" Kissinger asked. "We can let it drift, holding periodic meetings, reaffirming liturgical unity, papering over crises that exist and I dare say this can go on for many years but it cannot go on forever."

He spoke to a gathering of The Committee for a Free World, a private group which advocates a conservative foreign policy.

Kissinger said a basic issue facing the alliance is, "how much unity do we want and how much diversity can we stand. There must be some limits that the necessity of common action places on the unilateral decisions of the participants."

"If that limit leads to what I have described as the consensus of the fearful, if it leads to paralysis and inaction, then the alliance will gradually disintegrate because it will not be relevant to most of the issues that arise."

Poland paying interest on debt

NEW YORK

Citibank chairman Walter Wriston said Sunday that Poland had paid his bank some of the interest due on the country's 1981 debt in the past few weeks.

Wriston also predicted Poland would be able to meet interest payments due on its total debt of approximately $26 billion.

Speaking on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," Wriston said the East European country, recently placed under martial law, had not paid all the interest it owed.

When asked if the country had given a timetable for further payments he said:

"There's as much confusion in our groups of financial institutions which is reflected in the press... I don't believe there is any hard information until the transfers are made."

He said he "assumed" the Soviet Union was helping Poland pay off its debt interest, but said no one had hard facts to confirm that.

And he defended continuing the loans, saying, "In my view, if someone were to call a default on that debt, you would illustrate very clearly to the Poles they have only one friend... Russia. And it doesn't seem to me to be too productive."

Kissinger assails Western disunity

WASHINGTON

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger suggested Sunday that the Atlantic alliance could gradually disintegrate unless it is able to demonstrate greater unity in addressing global crises.

Kissinger said there is not even the "beginnings of a consensus" within the alliance on problems such as East-West relations, Central America,
