Residents applaud food, RAs

Noise, bicycle security, and food quality are the main areas of concern among dormitory residents, according to results of a November survey released Monday at a Residence Hall Governance Committee meeting.

The 197 students surveyed also praised custodial services, resident assistants, food quality, and expressed satisfaction with roommates.

The number of students objecting to dormitory noise levels is particularly noteworthy because such conditions hurt the housing department's ability to recruit and retain student residents, said Marge Ramey, assistant director of the department.

Boredom caused by eating at the same place every day may have contributed to the low food quality rating, Ramey said.

Many of the students who responded to the surveys included a request for a characteristics questionnaire, which would match roommates by personal habits and other characteristics, she said. Such a form is being worked on, Ramey said.

Council members speculated that returned surveys may not be representative of all dorm residents because only those students particularly pleased or displeased would return the randomly distributed forms.

Other survey results showed that more than 80 percent of students value recreational facilities and generally believe campus facilities to be good, and almost 80 percent would like to see more social and educational functions in their halls.

Almost 60 percent of the students surveyed indicated an interest in faculty members dining, and possibly living, in the residence halls.

In other business, the Council elected Doug Rappaport, a University Inn resident, as its new chair. Rappaport replaced Roy Elbie, a Carson Hall resident who resigned last week because of "personal reasons" and dissatisfaction with the Council's changing role in dormitory government.

The RHGC also voted to give $300 and loan $2,500 to a campus carnival being sponsored by the Hamilton and Bean dormitories later this spring.

Italian author, peace activist, speaks Feb. 11

Italian peace activist, poet, and author Danilo Dolci will speak at 8 p.m. Feb. 11 in Geology 150.

Dolci, author of the recently published Sicilian Lives, will speak on "Creativity, Education, and Grass Roots Development." His lecture is being sponsored by the EMU Cultural Forum.

Noted for his work for the unemployed and poor of Western Sicily, Dolci is being proposed for the Nobel Peace Prize.

Dolci reportedly uses several techniques in his work. Among them are "strikes-in-reverse," where the unemployed do public works without authorization; fasts; sit-ins, protest marches; and "underground" radio broadcasts.

Highlights of his work are considered to be the construction of Sicily's Jato Dam and a continuing fight against the Mafia.

Dolci's lecture is open to the public. More information is available from 686-4373.

WHAT AM I?

Upon a staff I sit,
I tell the name and pitch,
Not one, not two, but three,
Instruct the symphony.
