

Crater Lake park offers summer jobs

By Monica Harrington
Of the Emerald

Crater Lake National Park is one of the few places in the United States where cross-country skiers in mid-June are followed less than a month later by runners sweating under the summer heat.

It is also one of the few places in Oregon recruiting students for summer employment.

Crater Lake, like the rest of the National Parks network, is operated by two different organizations. The best known of the two is the National Park Service staff, which consists of the park's interpretive staff, patrol rangers, administration, and general maintenance crew.

But it's the other organization — the park's concession — that sends recruiters to college campuses throughout Oregon and Washington. These recruiters screen applicants for jobs in areas such as food service, housekeeping, and retail clerking.

Pat Louquet, office manager for the Crater Lake concession, says 120 students will be offered jobs for the 1982 season, which runs June 15-Sept. 9.

Living and working amid the beauty of Oregon's only national park may sound like the perfect job, but former employees don't always back that up. While there are dozens of spectacular spots in the park to hike to, seasonal employees find there's not adequate time to explore them. Almost all concession employees work six days a week, a schedule that doesn't leave much time for exploring.

Pam Pine, a University student who has worked at Crater Lake for three seasons, said she "had a great time the first two seasons. The third would have been wonderful too, if it weren't for management." Since employees all live and work together in close contact with their bosses, everything, both on and off the job, is subject to evaluation, she said, and the management is careful to emphasize that a replacement is but a phone call away.

The summer staff at Crater Lake operates like a mini-community, say former employees. The nearest city, Klamath Falls, is more than an hour's drive away, which forces the park employees to look to each other and their environment for entertainment.

Crater Lake's concessionaire, Canteen Company of Oregon, tries to help out by offering employee dances, movies, and a rec room. But for many workers, isolation and homesickness takes its toll, and there's usually a heavy turnover after the first two weeks.

Wages throughout all the national parks are low, but some workers, most notably the waiters and waitresses, make out very well. One University student who waited tables in the lodge dining room last summer made about $3,500 in tips and wages. The pay scale for other employees, however, hovers around the minimum wage.

The concession also deducts about $200 per month for room and board.

Concession workers live in the employee dormitory. Employees share rooms to store their belongings with 8-10 others, and bunk in sex-segregated sleeping porches at either end of the building.

A Crater Lake National Park recruiter will be at the job placement office February 10, 11, 24 and 25. Students interested in an interview should make an appointment at the placement office.
