EMU Cultural Forum Presents

DANILO DOLCI

Noted Italian peace activist, poet, author and theorist of non-violent direct action, Dolci will speak on "creativity, education, and Grass-roots developments".

Sicily exports Danilo Dolci. America exports Alexander Haig. Dolci comes to America to talk about non-violent human responsibility. Haig goes to Europe to huxter (sic) human extermination.

Those who would prefer not to die at the hands of Haig and his henchmen would do well to welcome Danilo Dolci, to ponder his words, to take a measure of hope. Haig, all appearances notwithstanding, is not god. He can only play god, and the performance is a dismal one. But Dolci plays human; and in an open season on humans we had best take seriously his counsel, his example, his unquenchable hope.

someone like that join the program."

While most of the attention was pointed towards Willhite, the Ducks were quietly assembling a large — the biggest number in the Pac-10 reported Wednesday — and talented class of 1986.

Due to penalties prescribed by the NCAA probation, Oregon could only offer 25 scholarships this year, compared with the usual 30 grant-in-aids allowed. The Ducks used all but one of them, plus awarded five scholarships going back to 1981-82 to the community college recruits already enrolled at the University.

Going in to the recruiting season, Brooks and his staff knew they needed help in some key areas:

- Immediate help in the offensive line, where most of the blame for last season's 2-9 record fell.

- Some young, but talented defensive linemen for the future.

- Replacements in the line-backer corps decimated by graduation.

- A complete stocking of players for the kicking game.

- More bodies to fill the quarterback position.

Without exception, the Ducks acquired help in all those areas within the group that included 10 Oregon prep recruits, and five junior college transfers.

"We did fill a lot of our needs," said Brooks. "I am very pleased with the in-state guys we were able to get. And I think the junior college guys are pretty key."

Brooks envisions transfers Ray Wheatley (6-6, 240), Ed Stringer (6-6, 260) and Steve Jensen (6-4, 247) stepping into the offensive line next season. Brian Heater (6-5, 240) from South Salem, and Mike Eerlin (6-4, 230) from Orme, Ariz., are the next-biggest in a large group of recruits — 11 in all.

For the defensive line, where graduation will take its toll next season, the Ducks lured Ryan Mickolasik (6-7, 235) from Del Oro, Calif.

Brooks is high on a pair of Oregon prep linebackers — Dan Devaney (6-3, 218) from Grant, and E.J. Duffy (6-2, 215) from Jesuit.

Tim Wise (6-0, 185) from Monte Vista, Calif. could be the answer to all of Oregon's kicking needs. He thumped a 59 yard field goal this year, and went for a 41.5 average per punt.

After receiving commitments from quarterbacks Todd Anderson and Dana Hill earlier in the week, the Ducks picked up a couple more — Stephen Jones (6-0, 185) transfer from College of the Siskiyou, and Kevin Hicks (6-4, 200) transfer from Santa Barbara Community College.

As always there are those few that get away. "We did lose some quality in-state kids," said Brooks. "I would have liked to have gotten more, and we lost some we would have liked to have."

Two of the notable preps that Brooks wanted were FitzPatrick and Ashland's Steve Roberts (6-4½, 220) an All-State lineman on offense and defense. Roberts chose to attend Washington.

But in light of the NCAA probation hanging over Oregon, Brooks has to be pleased with this group. "You never fill all your needs, but I think we got some guys who will really help us down the line."

"I think the recruiting class is pretty good. But the proof of a recruiting class is what happens when they come here."
