Duck free throws beat OSU

Women thrash Beavers 71-59

CORVALLIS - When things are offered to you free, it's natural to snatch them up quickly.

And Thursday night, the Oregon women's basketball team did just that. The Ducks, offered 40 free-throw attempts by the Oregon State Beavers, converted on 31 of them en route to a 71-59 Northwest League victory at Gill Coliseum.

"Our goal was to get the ball inside and try and draw the foul," said Oregon coach Elwin Heiny, after watching the Beavers commit 30 fouls. "I know Aki (Hill, the OSU coach) was getting mad at the officials at the beginning of the game.

But I thought the calls were correct."

Heiny was one of few in Gill to think so.

The officials, Norm Beck and Cathy Peterson, whistled foul after foul on the Beavers. Things got so bad for OSU that star forward Robyn Clark had to sit down with three fouls with 16:54 left in the first half. And with 13:59 remaining, the Beavers went into the penalty with seven fouls.

Oregon quickly took advantage of the opportunity.

The Ducks hit on an amazing 24 of 28 free-throw attempts to take a 36-27 first-half lead.

Oregon hit on 6-of-28 from the floor while OSU hit on 10-of-37.

"Oregon State is a very aggressive team," said Oregon senior all-American Bev Smith, who played in her last game with the Beavers. "With some officials, they don't get called, but with others, like tonight, they do get called."

"It was very physical on top and under the basket, but that's just the way Oregon State plays."

Things did not look good for the Ducks in the early going. Oregon missed shot after shot, and let the Beavers take a 12-8 lead with 14:45 remaining in the first half. But the Ducks, behind a string of 10 consecutive freethrows, took a 20-17 lead with 8:22 remaining.

It was at that juncture in the contest that OSU center Jan Martin picked up her third foul and had to leave the game.

Oregon scored the next eight points to take a 28-19 lead before the Beavers could find the basket again.

"I don't think their pressure defense really hurts us that much," Heiny said. "But a lot of our turnovers (29 for the game) were silly and caused by a lot of unforced errors on our part."

The Ducks won the game with a tremendous surge midway through the second half.

Leading 61-49, Oregon went on a 10-2 spurt to assume a 71-51 lead, and it was proverbial "garbage time" after that with 1:27 remaining.

Mary Ann Stoican, who had gone 0-7 from the floor in the first half, came alive in the second half to key the spurt. She hit on three shots to turn a 65-49 lead into a 71-51 Duck advantage. Stoican finished 4-for-9 from the floor.

"It bothered me that we didn't get our lead bigger than it was in the second half," Heiny said. "But it was pleasing that they didn't come back on us."

Defensively, Oregon center Alison Lang did a number on Martin.

Martin, who erupted for 25 points in the two teams' last meeting, a 63-60 Duck win, was held to 1-of-9 from the floor and three points for the game. She fouled out with 13:38 remaining to play.

"We really didn't do anything special on Jan, we just played good, aggressive defense," Heiny said. "Alison blocked a couple of her shots early in the game, and I think that kind of set the tempo."

For the game, Oregon hit on 20 of 45 field goal attempts and out-rebounded the Beavers 48-43. Oregon State connected on 21-of-70 from the field and 17-of-22 from the line. Lang led all scorers with 30 points, Judy Spoelstra led OSU with 20. But Heiny warned that the road ahead is still long.

"The season's not over yet," said the Duck coach. "It seems like none of the games are getting any easier."

Thursday night was a good example of that.
