Chancellor finalist opts for Arizona

TUCSON, Ariz.

An educator who had been one of four remaining finalists to become chancellor of the Oregon System of Higher Education will be the new president of the University of Arizona, a University of Arizona spokesman confirmed Thursday.

University of Massachusetts Chancellor Henry Koffler accepted the job Wednesday night, according to University of Arizona spokesman Grant Smith.

Koffler, 59, had interviewed with the Oregon Board of Higher Education in Portland on Wednesday. He had met during the previous several days with presidents of the Oregon system's eight campuses.

In accordance with Arizona law, the state Board of Regents will meet in a public session at 2 p.m. today to officially select Koffler for the school presidency.

But Smith said agreements have already been made and the meeting would merely serve as a formality.

Koffler's annual salary will match or exceed the $82,500 being paid to current President John Schaefer, Smith said. Koffler, like Schaefer, also will be provided with use of a university-owned home and car, he said.

Good friends stand up for you when you need them.

Phone calls got you nowhere, but this should get her attention. A mission requiring split-second timing, perfect planning and most importantly, some surefooted, stand-up guys.

When you come down to earth, spring for something special.

Tonight, let it be Löwenbräu.

Löwenbräu. Here's to good friends.

Revenue committee waits on tax hike

SALEM

The House Revenue Committee approved a minor part of Gov. Vic Atiyeh's new budget-balancing plan Thursday but deferred until today further work on a proposed income tax hike and cut in property tax relief.

The panel endorsed and sent to the full House a measure that would require payment of disputed tax bills before cases could be appealed to the state Tax Court.

Under current law, taxpayers who challenge the amount of tax the state says they owe can avoid paying anything until their case is settled in the courts.

Under the bill proposed by Atiyeh, a disputed bill would have to be paid before the case could go to the Tax Court. If the taxpayer won the case, the state would have to refund the taxes plus interest.

The bill (HB3314) would yield an estimated $8 million in added revenue in the current two-year budget. Revenue Department officials said the state has won 86 percent of the cases appealed during the past six years.

The major part of Atiyeh's latest plan for erasing a projected $337 million budget deficit would increase income taxes for most Oregonians and end property tax relief to the wealthiest homeowners and renters.
