Oregon wrestler Bill Nugent and the rest of the Ducks begin defense of their Pac-10 title today.

Wrestlers begin Pac-10s

A season full of hard work and two grueling weeks of twice-a-day workouts will all be behind Oregon's wrestlers when they hit the mat at Stanford Sunday for the 1982 Pac-10 wrestling championships.

For the first time in recent memory, the Ducks will pack a healthy starting lineup into the van heading south.

The only exception may be senior 150-pounder Barry Boyles, who is suffering pain in his lower back. But as Duck coach Ron Finley noted, this is the Pac-10 tournament, and he will wrestle.

Oregon enters this year's tournament in the role of defending champion. Finley says his troops will have to claim at least five individual titles if they want to hang on to that role for another year.

Finley expects the toughest competition to come from rival Oregon State and Arizona State, teams which accounted for two of the Ducks' four dual meet losses this season. The Sun Devils clobbered the Ducks down south, while the Beavers forced the Ducks to settle for a 14-win season, avenging an earlier loss to the Ducks with a 28-11 victory at McArthur Court two weeks ago.

Since that loss to the Beavers, the Duck grapplers have been working out twice a day under Finley's critical eye in preparation for the tourney.

"Dual meets don't mean much. It's the tournaments that matter," Finley said after the loss to OSU. Now he thinks his squad is ready to show what it can do.

"We've had two weeks of good, hard practice and I think we will be ready to get rolling on Sunday," Finley said. "I feel good about our chances going into the tournament."

A big reason for that good feeling is the return of defending Pac-10 champions Mike Erb and Bill Nugent to the Ducks along with 190-pound sophomore standout Lance Hochanadel.

Erb missed much of the regular season with an elbow injury before returning to action against the Beavers. Nugent missed the OSU meet with a leg injury after returning from a month in Russia, while Hochanadel missed the Ducks' last six outings with a back injury.

Finley listed Nugent, who took the title last year at 142, Hochanadel and Cliff Porter at 134 and heavyweight Dan Cook as four Ducks who "definitely have a good chance at first (place)."

The coach said that four other wrestlers could finish on top, including Erb, who took first at 118 last year. Other possible winners are Boyles at 150, Rick O'Shea at 158, and Keith Beutler, who beat out Paul Sheriff at 167.
