Draft penalty examined

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress will be asked this week to eliminate the possibility of jailing hundreds of thousands of young men who failed to meet Sunday's deadline to register for the draft.

Rep. Les Aspin, a member of the House Armed Services Committee, said he plans to introduce legislation this week that would make non-registration a misdemeanor carrying a maximum fine of $200 and no jail term.

violators off "scot free." If a draft is ordered, his bill would reimpose the stiffer penalties three weeks later, he said.

"It's one thing not to register... when that means evading the draft," he said. "It's something else to avoid registering when there is no prospect of a draft on the horizon. The penalty should have some relationship to the crime."

Currently, failure to register within 30 days of one's 18th birthday is a felony punishable by up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine. A grace period for an estimated 900,000 non-registrants born between 1960 and February 1964 to sign up without fear of prosecution expired Sunday.

Selective Service Director Thomas Turnage and Attorney General William Smith have promised to prosecute non-registrants, likely beginning in April or May.

Aspin, D-Wis., said his bill would avoid making "martyrs" out of draft resisters and boost registration because judges would be less inclined to let

But Selective Service spokeswoman Joan Lamb said latecomers who want to sign up at any U.S. post office won't be turned away.

Source ties Williams to 26 of 28 murders

ATLANTA (AP) — Investigators have evidence linking Wayne Williams to 26 of the 28 slayings of young blacks that cast a shadow over this city for more than two years, a source close to the case said Sunday.

free-lance photographer and self-styled talent scout, was described by his attorney as "holding up pretty well" Sunday, one day after he was sentenced to two consecutive life terms.

And officials will meet this week to consider closing the books on most of the slayings and disbanding the task force that investigated them.

"He was very coherent. He told me he definitely wants the case appealed," attorney Alvin Binder said after spending 40 minutes with Williams at the Fulton County jail.

Williams, a 23-year-old black

Binder said: "We're hearing that all the cases are closed. That's upsetting to Wayne. He had hoped the investigation would continue because if any one of the pattern or any other murders was solved, that would tend to exonerate him."

A source close to the investigation, who asked not to be identified, said authorities had collected evidence to link Williams to as many as 24 victims in addition to Cater and Payne.

TO FORMER COMMUNITY COLLEGE STUDENTS

The University of Oregon will host the Community College Conference on Wednesday, March 3, 1982. Counselors from Oregon community colleges will be on campus to meet with U of O students who previously attended community colleges. They would like to talk with you about your experience in transferring to the U of O. The information they get from you will enable them to better prepare other community college students to transfer.
