Napier's 1982 Audio Directions

Occasionally, we at Napier Audio wish to remind our customers of a few major (but often overlooked) areas of improving the sound quality of your existing hi-fi systems. If you suspect a problem in your system, take a few minutes to check the following:

- 1 SPEAKER WIRE PHASING

In order for your speakers to operate correctly, it is important that the "positive" (+) speaker terminal on amplifier "A" (see figure 1) is wired to the "positive" terminal on speaker "L" or "R" and likewise the "negative" (-) terminal on amplifier "A" connected to the "negative" terminal on speaker "L" or "R". Work "in-phase", resulting in optimum "imaging" and bass performance. Failure to follow this rule could result in an "out-of-phase" relationship, causing the speakers to work against each other, destroying the stereo "image" and effectively nullifying bass response.

- 2 SPEAKER PLACEMENT

Although many compromises must be made in placing speakers in various room situations, we have a basic rule to follow: The distance between speakers "A" and "B" (see figure 2) should be equal in their distances to listener "C" in order to produce the desired stereo image "X". Any variations to this rule will make the image "X" unrealistically "wide" (if "AB" is greater than "AC" or "BC") or unrealistically "narrow" (if "AB" is less than "AC" or "BC").

- 3 OPTIMIZING TURNTABLE/CARTRIDGE PERFORMANCE

If you are not certain that your phono cartridge is properly aligned and balanced in the tonearm of your turntable, it is more than likely out of adjustment. For a modest $5.00 charge, we will adjust your turntable and cartridge alignment for optimum performance. If a new cartridge is purchased, we will make these adjustments for no charge. Bring your turntable in any time; no appointment is necessary.

We hope these simple directions will help you to appreciate the sound of your hi-fi system, regardless of the make or age of the various components. We are here to serve your audio needs.
