Shuttle lands;
mission a success

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M.

Framed by purple mountains and a brilliant blue sky, America's space shuttle sliced through desert breezes Tuesday to crown its longest, toughest and most ambitious test flight.

Three down, one to go and Columbia flies for hire.

Weight on wheels came at 9:05 a.m. MST on an unfamiliar runway, 22 hours past due. The landing ended an eight-day mission that demonstrated Columbia's versatility and stamina in space.

The weather was as kind to astronauts Jack Lousma and C. Gordon Fullerton as it was inhospitable the day before. Skies were relatively calm — a stiff headwind instead of the cantankerous sandstorm that made a return Monday impossible.

"Everybody in America started breathing again when you made that landing," Pres. Reagan told the pilots in a telephone call. "Our thoughts and prayers have been with you every second that you've been up there."

In Houston, flight operations director Glynn Lunney said the spacecraft survived its trip better than the two-day second flight last November.

"STS-3 (flight 3) was a very powerful success," he said, and added that nothing stands in the way of "flying payloads for paying customers," beginning with the fifth flight next November.

The astronauts and their ship had been in space 8 days, 4 minutes and 49 seconds since launch from the Kennedy Space Center in Florida on March 22. Had the weather proved unacceptable Tuesday, Columbia would have been directed to Kennedy's concrete runway.

active infections.

The FDA said the ointment will reduce virus growth and shorten the healing time for sores in patients with initial infections. In tests, it also significantly decreased the pain in men, but not in women.

The ointment will be available by prescription in about a month under the brand name Zovirax by the Burroughs Wellcome Co. of Research Triangle Park, N.C.

Most cases of genital herpes are caused by the herpes simplex virus type 2 — one of the family of five herpes viruses that cause a wide range of ailments including chicken pox, shingles, infectious mononucleosis, cold sores and even birth defects.

The FDA, which took only eight months to approve the drug, said it "did not show important benefits" for people with recurrent outbreaks. However, the drug's developers believe it has promise for all sufferers from genital herpes.

Recession slowing,
but not yet over

WASHINGTON

A key government forecasting gauge indicated Tuesday that the recession, though probably slowing, is not yet over. Treasury Secretary Donald Regan conceded as much, telling Congress that "the economy continues in the grip of the second recession in two years."

Regan spoke confidently of recovery this summer. And private economists generally echo that forecast, though with less apparent confidence.

But a 0.3 percent February decline in the government's Index of Leading Indicators, a report designed to show future economic trends, seemed to indicate recovery was hardly at hand.

The February decline, the 10th straight monthly drop, was considerably smaller than the 0.8 percent and 1.2 percent drops in December and January.

But Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige implied that February's index will probably be revised downward when later figures are available.

Regan, testifying before the House Banking Committee, said the overall economy would turn up slightly in the April-June quarter although still remaining "not very strong."

He said that July-September growth — as measured by inflation-adjusted gross national product — should be at a relatively brisk annual rate of 4½-to-5 percent.

FDA approves
genital herpes drug

WASHINGTON

The first drug to ease suffering from genital herpes should be available in drugstores in 30 days, following its approval Tuesday by the Food and Drug Administration.

Up to 20 million Americans are afflicted with genital herpes, a painful venereal disease that, unlike syphilis and gonorrhea, cannot be cured.

Dr. Arthur Hull Hayes, the FDA commissioner, said the new prescription drug, acyclovir ointment, "is not a cure for herpes virus infections," but is "a step forward" in treatment.

Genital herpes is caused by a highly contagious virus that usually is transmitted during sexual intercourse. It causes genital sores that blister and form ulcers. The sores heal but may recur for unknown reasons, and doctors tell people to refrain from sex while they have
