British armada Falkland bound

LONDON (AP) - Defense Secretary John Nott said Sunday that Britain is ready to fight Argentina over the Falkland Islands, and the Royal Navy prepared two aircraft carriers to lead a 40-vessel armada on a two-week journey to the remote colonial outpost.

Nott, calling a peaceful solution "unlikely," said Britain could mount a blockade in the South Atlantic "without any assistance from our allies" and would storm the Falklands "if it is the only and necessary course."

Asked in a television interview if Britain would attack the Argentine mainland, Nott said, "I am not closing any options, but I would not wish to discuss that particular one."

Argentine President Gen. Leopoldo F. Galtieri told journalists in Buenos Aires that "if the Argentine people are attacked by military forces, be it land, naval or air forces, the Argentine nation in arms will do battle with all the means at its disposal."

An Argentine government communique said Argentine forces suffered at least six casualities in Friday's takeover of the Falkland, South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands. The British suffered no losses, it Argentine naval sources denied reports from London that 22 British marines destroyed an Argentine helicopter and a warship before being overwhelmed.

Nott declared that British administration would be restored to the Falklands. "We mean to do it even if we have to fight," he said. "We are not making the largest task force available outside the two superpowers without the intention, if we have to, of using it."

The Falklands, 250 miles off Argentina's southeast coast, have been held by the British and claimed by Argentina since 1833. The inhabitants include 1,800 pro-British descendants of 19th century Welsh and Scottish settlers.

Opposition Labor Party legislators, backed by some rank-and-file members of the ruling Conservative Party, renewed calls Sunday for Nott and Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington to resign over what they called Britain's humiliation in the Falk-

The U.N. Security voted 10-1 with four abstaining votes to call for Argentina to withdraw its troops and for negotiations to begin. Argentina's foreign minister said his country is ready to talk but made no mention of withdrawing the troops.

After the television interview, Nott flew to the south England base of Portsmouth on a farewell visit to the aircraft carriers, HMS Invincible and HMS Hermes, and the assault ship. Fearless. The British domestic agency, Press Association, said they will leave Monday with a total of 5,000 officers and men for the 8,000-mile journey. Among them is Prince Andrew, 22, second in line to the throne, who pilots a helicopter.

The fleet, some sailing from the British base at Gibraltar off Spain's southern tip, includes destroyers, frigates armed with missiles and supply ships.

Affirmative action gets labor office OK

After a lengthy investigation, the U.S. Department of Labor has approved the University's affirmative action program.

The department's Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs sifted through reports and documents for nine months before accepting the University's goals, says Norma "Bean" McFadden, director of the affirmative action office.

The OFCCP is the federal 'enforcement arm" of the affirmative action program. In its review, the OFCCP commented on several strengths of the University's affirmative action program, including a policy on sexual harassment and a career development plan for faculty and staff.

However, the OFCCP criticized the affirmative action program on campus in a number of areas. Specifically, the agency saw a need for the University to:

· provide a more detailed analysis on the success rates of women and minorities compared with males and non-minorities in the area of promotion and tenure

· provide more justification for promotions of males and non-minorities when minorities or women are equally quali-

· centralize all the individual department's records on promotion and tenure. The OFCCP maintains that decentralized record keeping makes it difficult for the affirmative action office to monitor the promotion and tenure eligibility of faculty members.

· examine under-representation of women and minorities in individual departments in the arts and sciences college.

 divide all professorial ranks into tenured and untenured subgroups.

The University already has developed and approved remedies for the problem areas, McFadden says, adding that her department's major goal is to bring a larger percentage of women and minorities into the University's workforce.

Academic employment gains for women and minorities have been "fairly slow" over the past decade, she says. McFadden cites budget restraints that have limited the number of jobs as the main reason for the lack of diversity in faculty and staff on campus.
