THE STUNT
MAN

This innovative, energetic masterpiece of pure moviemaking places director Richard Rush in the class of cinematic virtuosos. A movie within a movie, a suspenseful mystery, an offbeat romance: No formula applies to The Stunt Man, which weaves innumerable and dazzling stunts and impressive performances into a complex story about paranoia and illusion versus reality. Peter O'Toole delivers a brilliant portrayal of a satanic movie director. Steve Railsback stands in as a stunt man, the previous one was killed on the set. Frantically paced and tautly edited for continuous thrills, cleverly written and scored, The Stunt Man is a pleasurable puzzle of cinematic delights.

Resurrection

Ellen Burstyn was nominated for an Oscar for her role in this powerful, dramatic film. She sensitively and intimately portrays a young woman who regains life after a momentarily fatal car accident, only to discover that she has the power to heal through touch.

ORCHESTRA REHEARSAL

The Decline of the West in C Major
Written and directed by Federico Fellini, Orchestra Rehearsal is simply what it sounds like. This rehearsal, however, is constantly interrupted by different musicians and their union representations: The poor German conductor is unable to hold things together. The situation becomes a metaphor for dictatorial government and the result is hilarious, even slightly musical. Orchestra Rehearsal will be shown with the short, Mystery of the Leaping Fish, a 1916 Douglas Fairbanks film which is an utterly outrageous parody on Sherlock Holmes' addiction to cocaine.

Dr. Strangelove

Director Stanley Kubrick's irreverent spectacular about nuclear war. The film is an outrageously brilliant satire - the most original American comedy in years and at the same time a supersonic thriller that should have audiences chomping their fingernails right down to the funny bone. Starring George C. Scott as Gen. "Buck" Turgidson and Peter Sellers in three major roles as Mandrake, the U.S. President, and Dr. Strangelove.

PIXOTE

Winner of 1981 Best Foreign Film by N.Y. and L.A. Film Critics, Pixote is a shockingly lyrical Brazilian film about the life of some abandoned children learning to survive in complete poverty. Winner of eight Academy Awards, this hard-hitting drama about corruption in the longshoreman's union stands as a major achievement in American film. Not only does it tackle complex social, political, and personal issues without losing any of its dramatic force, but it has become a lasting influence on American culture. Brando and Eva Marie Saint are superb, along with Karl Malden, Lee J. Cobb, Rod Steiger, Martin Balsam and Fred Gwynne.
