Ducks' depth key vs. LSU

By John Healy
 Of the Emerald

Oregon has achieved national recognition for its men's dual meet track program because of the superior depth the Ducks seem to have year in and year out.

Very rarely do the Ducks face a team with equivalent depth, except when a team like last year's top-ranked dual meet team, Washington State, comes to Eugene.

Luckily for Oregon, there are few Washington States floating around the collegiate track scene.

Oregon's opponent this Saturday at Hayward Field, Louisiana State, certainly doesn't fit into the same category as the Cougars.

The Tigers have only four "big meet" competitors. Joe Maciejczyk, the second-ranked collegian in the shot put last spring, has a best of 66-0 $\frac{1}{4}$. Clyde Bishop, the second-ranked prep in the nation last year at 100 meters (10.1), will be in the 100 and 200, and long jumper/triple jumper Edward Lloyd (25-3 $\frac{1}{4}$, 53-4) should have no problems winning his events. The Tigers also have freshman Greg Duplantis, the prep pole vault record-holder with a mark of 17-11 $\frac{3}{4}$.

Oregon will again be without its top horizontal jumper, as Lamar Hurd is still hampered by a bad hamstring, and intermediate hurdler Don Ward's knee is still tender. Jerome Walker is still recovering from hepatitis, but sprinter Bart McGillivray and weightman Kent Landerholm have recovered from the flu.

The two teams faced each other last year at the LSU Invitational, which attracted eight teams to Baton Rouge. The Ducks easily won and the meet gave Oregon coach Bill Dellinger a chance for a first-hand look at many of the Tigers.

But Saturday's meet will be the first dual competition between the two squads, and its likely to be a bit of a shock for LSU. The Tigers are extremely weak in a number of events, including the javelin, discus, 800 and 5,000.

Following the regular meet, Alberto Salzar returns to Hayward field with a world-class field to compete in the "KPNW/Kendall Datsun Invitational" 10,000-meter race. The race will feature the four-event world record-holder Henry Rono and Sulieman Nyambui the Tanzanian from the University of Texas-EI Paso, who holds numerous NCAA championship titles.

Regular competition will begin at 12:30 p.m. with the hammer throw, and the first running event will start at 2 p.m. Tickets are on sale at the University Athletic Department ticket office and at the gate the day of the meet.

First year Oregon coach Charles Sylvester has never seen a UO softball game.

But, if the weather holds, he will get his chance Friday when the Duck women open a five-date home schedule with a double-header against Portland State at 2:30 p.m. The games will be played at the field on the south end of Hayward Field.

Sophomore Stephanie Heisler, who did not pitch an inning last year, will be on the mound in the first game for the Ducks and sophomore Marcy Sowa, 3-3 in 1981, will pitch the second game.

The rest of the Duck lineup according to Sylvester will consist of sophomore Susan Tuggle catching, sophomore Karen Vipond at first base, junior Krista Parent at second, sophomore Katie Hickey at third, and senior Vicki Hogan at shortstop. In the outfield the Ducks will have Alice Marchant in left, senior June Liu in center and freshman Deanna Eckelman in right.

The Ducks are coming off of a 9-19 season, during which they played PSU five times without a victory. The Duck women will see PSU eight times this spring if the weather cooperates.

The Viks have a leg up on Oregon going into Friday's contest. The Viks have already played 12 games, all on a spring swing through northern California, during which they posted an 8-4 record.

Portland State has a lot of new faces in the lineup this season, highlighted by a whole new infield. Leading the returnees from the team that went to Division II nationals for the third straight year last season will be junior pitcher Deb Fitzhugh, who is scheduled to pitch Friday's first game if she can overcome a nagging foot injury.

Fitzhugh, and transfer Suzette Combs who is slated to pitch game 2 for the Viks will be throwing to veteran catcher Mary Ross, who will be behind the plate in both games according to PSU coach Teri Mariani.

The outfield will consist of Patti Perkins, who has moved to left field from right where she played last season, senior Delores Krumm in center and either Prater or sophomore Ellen Carder in right.

GYROS

(pronounced YEAR-OS)

Gyros is a lean blend of specially selected meats. It is lightly seasoned and cooked to sear the outside so that the juice and flavor are sealed inside. The meat is cooked to order on the Kronomatic® broiler which gives it that "Charcoal-like" flavor. Served as a sandwich with Pita bread, and fresh tomatoes, onions and special sauce.
