THE EMU CULTURAL FORUM presents
Breathless
Jean-Luc Godard helped start the French New Wave of the early sixties with this, his first film. A shy, mysterious film, Breathless is about the relationship between a spoiled American woman in Paris and her French lover. He's a small-time crook and his crimes eventually cause him to be killed, fostering that famous Godardian quote, "You really are a little bitch." A landmark in alternative cinema, and the first film of a modern film master.

YWCA PRESENTS
Jane Fonda in
A DOLL'S HOUSE
Henrik Ibsen's play has been a starring vehicle for world famous actresses. Nazimova, Laurette Taylor, Ruth Gordon, Helen Hayes, Peggy Ashcroft, have all interpreted the part of "Nora Helmer." Nora's search for individuality and its correspondence with modern feminism was an obvious attraction to Jane Fonda. This production was filmed entirely on location, utilizing interiors of houses in the town of Roros, Norway, a starkly beautiful one-time copper mining center which has remained relatively unchanged since the mid-19th century period of Ibsen's play.
