Weaver proposes freeze initiative

A proposed state initiative that calls for a freeze on nuclear weapons will "send a strong message" to Pres. Ronald Reagan that will make him think twice about stockpiling more nuclear arms, U.S. Rep. Jim Weaver said Thursday.

"The nuclear freeze I have put on the ballot is to save our lives and to save our jobs," Weaver said in a press conference at the Eugene Conference Center.

A campaign to get the issue on the ballot will be announced within two weeks, Weaver said. The initiative, also supported by U.S. Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore., already has a ballot title but will require about 55,000 signatures from registered Oregon voters before it qualifies for a ballot spot.

A similar measure will be on the June 5 ballot in California, he said.

It is crucial to bring the federal budget into line by cutting the "astronomical increase" in the defense budget, Weaver said. Reagan has proposed a $221 billion defense budget, a 17-percent increase over the current budget.

The defense budget "will destroy jobs in Oregon because it drains money out of the economy," Weaver said.

For the price of two B-1 bombers, 10,000 jobs could be created, and every house in Oregon could be made energy efficient, Weaver said.

There is a strong bipartisan support in Congress for cutting the defense budget, Weaver said, adding that the defense budget should be cut twice — once to help balance the budget and a second time to pump more money into the housing industry and into energy efficiency programs.

Law school plans Saturday forum

The chief justice of the Oregon Supreme Court will keynote a court reform symposium at the University law school Saturday.

Arno Denecke's keynote address at 9 a.m. begins the day-long discussion of Ballot Measure 5 and related issues. The measure — on the May 18 primary ballot — would authorize the governor to appoint the Oregon Supreme Court chief justice.

State Sen. Ted Kulongoski, D-Junction City; Hans Linde, associate justice of the Oregon Supreme Court; George Joseph, chief judge of the Oregon Court of Appeals; and others will speak on the measure, circuit and district court consolidation, and control of circuit courts by the state government.

Derrick Bell, dean of the law school, will moderate.

The symposium, sponsored by the Student Bar Association, is free. For more information, call John Karpinski or Jim Edmunson at 689-6456.

Activist to speak on prison rights

The founder of a prisoners' rights group in Burnaby, British Columbia, speaks on "Instead of Prisons" tonight in downtown Eugene.

Claire Culhane, author of Barred From Prison, begins her presentation at 8 p.m. in Harris Hall at the Lane County Courthouse, 123 E. Eighth Ave.

Culhane, an activist who opposed Canada's involvement in Vietnam, turned her attention after the war to Canada's prisons.

Barred From Prison is a personal account of prison reform at the Oakalla and British Columbia penitentiaries. A Canadian reviewer wrote, "Claire Culhane is a brave Canadian. It will take a brave Canadian citizenry to march to the drum she is banging."

Culhane is brought to Eugene by Sponsors, Inc., and People for Prison Alternatives. For more information, call Vicky Plaisted at 343-5419.

Forest Service needs volunteers

The United State Forest Service is looking for volunteers this summer to help maintain and improve the forests in Oregon and Washington.

In an effort to cut costs without slashing service, the forest service is offering a wide range of jobs to willing volunteers, says Jeff Sirmon of the forest service.

In eastern Oregon and Washington, the service will emphasize range management and dispersed recreation, and in the western portions of those states, it will concentrate on timber management and developed recreation areas, Sirmon says.

Work could include taking wildlife censuses, monitoring stream flow and water quality, helping backcountry travelers, maintaining trails and camping areas, conducting natural history walks, or office work, he says.

"There is a job to fit most anyone."

Work hours are flexible, and the only qualifications needed are good health, and — for anyone under 18 years old — parental consent, Sirmon says.

Workers are not federal employees, but they do receive legal protection and insurance for work-related injuries and, in some cases, may be reimbursed for travel, food and lodging expenses, he says.

Volunteering is not limited to individuals. Organizations can participate through the "Adopt a Trail" program and maintain a specific trail in a national forest.

For more information, contact the nearest Forest Service office.

Gourmet to talk on world hunger

The former "Galloping Gourmet" trots into Eugene today to speak on "Creative Relinquishment."

Graham Kerr, the former television host who directs a Third World food project for Youth With A Mission, speaks from noon to 1:30 p.m. in the Koinonia Center at 1414 Kincaid St.

Kerr's talk is presented by the Mars Hill Forum of the Restoration Campus Ministry. Mars Hill is designed to "demonstrate the adequacy of the Christian world view in areas popularly thought to be outside the scope of religion."

Next Friday at the forum, Gary Snively, pastor of the University Street Church of Christ, will discuss "The Restoration of the New Testament Church."

A debate on "A Sociological Perspective of Religion vs. The Revelatory View of Christianity" will be held April 30. Speakers include David Wagner, University biology professor; Ben Johnson, University sociology professor; David Root, professor of New Testament at Northwest Christian College; and Jack Crabtree of the McKenzie Study Center.

For more information, call Dick Beswick at 484-1707.
