

We're almost done.

emerald -inter/national

From Associated Press reports

Haig sends peace proposals to British

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina Secretary of State Alexander Haig, warning that time "is indeed running out" in the British-Argentine conflict over the Falkland Islands, sent peace proposals to Britain Monday and left here for Washington.

The British government, in a surprisingly swift response to Haig's proposals, said "at first sight they do not meet the requirements strongly expressed by Parliament, particularly on the need to regard as paramount the wishes of the islanders."

It called the proposals worked out by Haig during four days of talks with Argentine leaders "complex and difficult."

Virtually all of the 1,800 residents of the Falklands are of British descent and opposed to Argentina, which seized the British colony April 2.

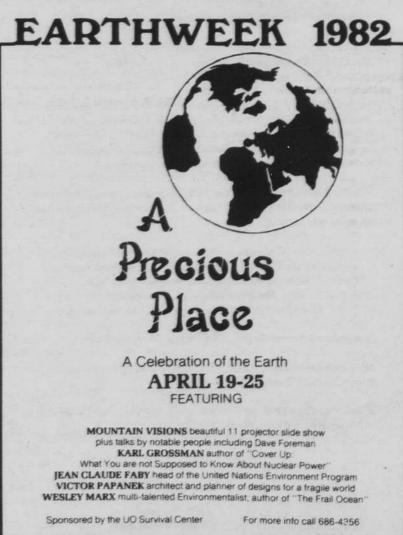

A 40-ship British war fleet is approaching the Falklands, 250 miles off the Argentine coast. The British Defense Ministry has refused to give its location, but unofficial estimates are that advance units could be within striking distance of the islands sometime late this weekend.

In Washington, a spokesman for the Organization of American states said the OAS permanent council would meet Tuesday at Argentina's request. Most Latin American countries back Argentina, and the OAS could theoretically establish a multilateral defense force against the British.

Israeli soldiers remove squatters

YAMIT, Occupied Sinai

Israeli troops removed 23 families from a Sinai settlement Monday, starting a largescale evacuation of ultra-nationalists opposed to the Israeli withdrawal from the desert peninsula.

Israel is to hand the last sector of Sinai to Egypt on Sunday. While soldiers finally began tackling the Sinai squatters, top Egyptian and American diplomats conferred with Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government in Jerusalem about problems between Israel and Egypt.

The army clamped down on reporters in Yamit, the main settlement in sand-dune country on the Mediterranean coast. But reports on the squatters' two-way radios indicated that a handful of families were evicted from other settlements as soldiers removed the 23 squatter families from Talmei Yosef, five miles east of Yamit.

"There was some weeping and everybody is in depression, both us and the army," Menachem Granit, who was evicted from Talmei Yosef, told AP correspondent Marcus Eliason by walkie-talkie.

The soldiers were unarmed and behaved gently, and there was virtually no violence, the Israeli said.

In Yamit, upwards of 2,000 squatters tensely awaited the army. Much attention focused on a dozen extremists who threaten to commit suicide if troops try to remove them from the fortress-like air raid shelter where they have barricaded themselves.

Census bureau announces results

WASHINGTON

Americans are better educated, more likely to live alone, and less likely to use rapid transit systems than 10 years ago, the Census Bureau reported Monday.

The bureau's new profile of the American people was formulated from the data on the 1980 Census long forms.

This is the earliest such sample information has even been available following a census, Chapman said. Among the findings were: • The percentage of Americans using public transportation to get to work was 6.3 percent in 1980, down from 8.9 percent a decade earlier.

• For the first time more than half - 66.3 percent - of all people aged 25 and over have completed four years of high school.

• About 17 percent of Americans have completed four years of college, up from 11 percent in 1970.

• Median household income in 1979 was $16,830, up 98.3 percent from 1969.

 Non-family households, that is people living alone or with non-relatives, now constitute more than one-fourth - 26.7 percent - of all households in the country.

• Nationwide, the percentage of people living in poverty declined from 13.7 percent to 12.5 during the decade, Chapman said, with the largest decline in the southern states, where it had been highest.

Woman astronaut named to crew

WASHINGTON

Dr. Sally Ride, an astrophysicist, will become America's first women in space next year as a crew member for the seventh flight of the space shuttle, NASA announced Monday.

The space agency also named Guion Bluford, an Air Force lieutenant colonel, as the first American black assigned to an orbital mission. He also will fly in 1983 on Challenger, following Ride's flight.

Ride, 30, is to fly with three male astronauts, all military officers, on the second mission of the second shuttle, the Challenger. The flight, scheduled for six days, is set for liftoff April 20, 1983.

She will serve as a mission specialist, working with three satellites that are to be placed in orbit from the ship's cargo bay. They are a West German scientific satellite and communications satellites for Telesat of Canada and the Indonesian government.

Commanding the mission will be Navy Capt. Robert Crippen, 44, who flew on the maiden flight of the first shuttle, Columbia, a year ago. The pilot will be Navy Capt. Frederick Hauck, 41.

Only one other woman,

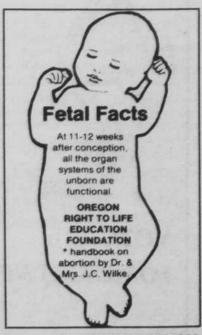

Our puzzle is almost solved. And once it is, you'll have the answer to many of those nagging questions that cloud your future.

We'll tell you about career opportunities that you could take advantage of right after graduation. You'll find out exactly what you'll be expected to do, and what you'll get in return.

Keep watching. Tomorrow, we'll solve more than just our puzzle. We'll solve yours.

Valentina Tereshkova of the Soviet Union, has flown in space, for 71 hours in June 1963.

Tuesday, April 20, 1982

Page 4