Officials back tax proposal

By Steve Hooks
Of the Emerald

Elected Lane County officials rallied Wednesday morning at the county commissioners' chambers for voter support of a $10-million increase in the county tax base.

If approved on the May 18 ballot, the proposal — known as Measure 8 — increases the present tax base from $4.2 million to $14.2 million.

If the proposal is not approved, Lane County faces a "financial disaster of the first order," said Mike Williams, acting chair of the county budget committee. County service levels would be reduced drastically, he added.

"We're not crying wolf. This is real," Williams said.

The sheriff and the mayors of Eugene and Springfield also showed up to plug the measure.

"We in the cities in no way can pick up those services" lost to county budget cuts, Springfield Mayor John Lively said.

Eugene Mayor Gus Keller asked citizens to take a "long, serious look" at the ballot measure. It would be too easy to vote "no" without knowledge of the consequences, he said.

"Criminals know no boundaries," Sheriff Dave Burks said. His staff of 24 patrol deputies would be pared down to seven deputies, and the department would lose one of its four investigators, he said.

One unsolved homicide could tie up the three investigators for months, leaving other crimes to go uninvestigated, he said.

Commissioner Scott Lieuallen said the county budget committee, county commissioners, mayors and civic groups unanimously endorse the ballot measure.

According to a Lane County handout on the measure, a $40,000 homeowner would pay $60 more per year in property taxes.

The state constitution allows a 6-percent annual increase in the tax base without voter approval. Voters decide at the polls on any increase over the 6-percent limitation.

Civil defense looked at

The Reagan administration's seven-year civil defense program disclosed in late March led Students for a Nuclear-Free Future to sponsor a forum on how to prepare for a nuclear attack.

The administration's program is designed to provide for "survival of a substantial portion of the population in the event of nuclear attack."

Steve Williamson, who coins himself a "survivalist," told the 40 people at Tuesday night's meeting in the EMU that "nobody can take care of you but you."

People should start now to prepare for a nuclear holocaust because "we do have a chance to come through the initial catastrophe," Williamson said. His advice is to buy canned food when on sale and to collect water storage containers, propane, a medical kit, hand garden tools, and Clorox bleach (to disinfect the contaminated water).

But Glen Gordon, a Eugene physician and member of Physicians for Social Responsibility, says there is no way to prepare for a nuclear war because no one will be around to provide medical care.

"I think the 'survivalist' view is a very self-concerned view, and I appreciate that. But we are social people who live together in a society, and it seems very important to me in the whole issue of nuclear war that we maintain our community."

EASY RIDER

Dennis Hopper and Peter Fonda star in this late sixties ballad of two motorcycle riders journeying east across America from an easy calm into the eye of the country's storm. Jack Nicholson is brilliant as a radical Southern lawyer who has surreal vision of Venusians when he gives up scotch for joints. Rich with music (Steppenwolf, Byrds, Electric Prunes), jargon and naivete of the late sixties, Easy Rider deserves its title as an early cult classic.
