

Summer orientation for freshmen

Program acquaints students with campus

An early orientation program in July will give entering freshmen opportunities for personal academic advising and early registration for fall term classes.

Each of the five Early Orientation and Registration Programs has a limited number of spaces, says Gregg Lobisser, orientation director. Early submission of the registration form can help students reserve space at the session they prefer, he says.

EORP offers participants a choice of three detailed evening and day introductions to the University and two condensed day-only orientations. The evening-day programs are scheduled for July 18-19, July 25-26 and July 29-30. The dates for the day-only programs are July 24 and July 31, both Saturdays.

The reservation deadline for all EORP sessions is June 30. The summer programs are designed for entering freshmen and freshmen transfer students with 44 or fewer hours of college credit as well as their parents.

Both program options offer students an introduction to the University's curriculum, small group academic advising workshops, individual meetings with a faculty adviser and registration for fall term classes.

During the longer orientations, students also may participate in sessions on studying, housing options, college writing, career perspectives, financial aid and the Eugene area and the University campus.

The schedule for parents includes sessions on academic programs, financial aid, education and careers, housing options, parents' survival tips and University support services. Parents also will have the opportunity for informal visits with faculty as well as a faculty panel and parent discussion group.

The fee for student EORP participants is $20, which includes a University catalog and an outdoor barbecue. Parents may participate for free.

Housing and meals will be available at additional cost in University residence halls for EORP students, parents and guests.

For a registration form and additional information, contact the Orientation Office, 270 Oregon Hall, phone 686-3218.

STEELYARD BLUES

Jane Fonda, Peter Boyle and Donald Sutherland sail through this wild comedy about a group of outrageous misfits who take on society, the establishment, rules, pettiness, stupidity and superficiality. It's an even match, but they beat the establishment and escape in a renovated airplane to a Utopian country with no jails. It's kooky yet striking satire with an imperishable cast.
