Exhibits

The featured exhibitions this summer at the University Museum of Art are paintings, monoprints and drawings by two well-known Northwest artists.

The "LaVerne" show, which runs from June 20 to July 25, will feature the recent works of University printmaking professor LaVerne Krause. Krause is a well known Eugene artist whose works are widely exhibited and collected. Included in her major exhibition are paintings and monoprints of European landscapes, mostly of Italy and Southwest Europe where she spent last year on sabbatical leave, supported by a Wurlitzer

Foundation grant.

Also on display will be selected paintings and drawings of birds, by Morris Graves, an internationally recognized artist, from the museum's permanent collection of more than 500 works by the artist. The "A Bird in Hand" show will also run June 20-July 25.

Graves, whose work is in museums and distinguished private collections throughout the United States and Europe, was born in Oregon in 1910.

In addition to these major showings in the large main floor galleries, the works of Seattle photographer Peter deLory will be featured in the "Photography of Oregon Gallery."
