'Jam' readies to spread rock

Football won't be spiraling through the air in Autzen Stadium July 25 because rock and roll enthusiasts will take to the astroturf for Oregon Jam 1982.

The "Jam" has become an annual event for Eugene's summer concert goers. Several of the groups slated to play have played Autzen Stadium before. Last year the concert drew 36,000 people.

The British band Foreigner, on a national tour, headlines the five-act bill that ranges from heavy to middle-weight rock.

The "middle-of-the-road rock" band, known for such hits as "Urgent", "Jukebox Hero" and "Waiting for a Girl Like You," will arrive in Eugene after a performance in Seattle. Double Tee Promotions, Inc., the promoters of the "Jam," call Foreigner the most popular band in the United States.

Also on the bill:

Loverboy, a group from Vancouver, British Columbia, will repeat as performers, having played the "Jam" last year. Loverboy has had widespread success in the last two years with two popular albums. Songs like "The Kid is Hot Tonight" and "Working for the Weekend" have brought them extensive recognition.

Blue Oyster Cult, an East Coast band, will be coming to the "Jam" for the third year in a row. They have been widely recognized for a long time with hits like "Don't Fear the Reaper" and recently "Burnin' for You" and "Godzilla."

Joan Jett, backed by the Blackhearts, has only lately become a rock success. Jett, a dynamic rocker who started with the legendary Runaways, has climbed to the top of the charts in Britain and this country with songs like "I Love Rock and Roll" and "Crimson and Clover." Jett and company are veterans of the midwest rock circuit.

The opening act will be the British group Taxi. The band is just now making inroads in the rock charts with songs like "Girl (New York City)" and "Cocktail Queen." Taxi, reversing a trend, has just immigrated to Portland and recently released their second album.

Advance tickets are $16 and have been on sale since June 11 at various locations throughout the state. In Eugene, tickets may be purchased at Everybody's Records, Meier & Frank and the University Athletic Department.

ODE announces summer schedule

The Oregon Daily Emerald will begin regular publication Thursday and publish two issues a week, Tuesdays and Thursdays, through the end of summer term.

This special summer orientation issue was coordinated by Debbie Howlett and designed by John Healy. Mark Pynes coordinated photos, Ann Peterson was production manager, Darlene Gore was advertising director, Sally Oljar handled the classified ads and Jean Ownbey was the controller. Cover photo by Mark Pynes.
