Officials to tour campus

Government and school board officials from Lane County have been invited on a "field trip" to the University Thursday. The purpose of the event is "to educate the general public about the role of research in economic development," says Charlene Curry, University director of governmental relations and coordinator of the event.

Those invited include elected officials and school board members from Cottage Grove, Junction City, Eugene and Springfield. Curry expects about 25 officials to attend.

The visit will start with greetings and coffee in the President's office. The visitors will tour the College of Education first, where Dean Robert Gilberts will discuss the uniqueness of the University's education programs.

The bulk of the tour is formed by three science facilities: the Institute of Molecular Biology, the Institute of Chemical Physics and the Department of Geology.

Pres. Olum and the seven faculty who are members of the National Academy of Sciences will host the luncheon. Speakers at the luncheon will include English professor Barbara Mossberg, who will discuss the humanities, and Richard Hersh, dean of the Graduate School and associate provost for research, who will talk about the role of a research university in economic development.

The tour is the second in a series of such events. The initial tour this spring brought labor leaders to campus.

Curry says the tours are "field trips" for the community designed to generate advocacy for the University.

Graduate dean gets capital fellowship

Richard Hersh, dean of the graduate school and associate provost for research at the University, has been awarded a Congressional Fellowship in the Office of Technology Assessment, Washington, D.C.

Hersh, 39, will work from August through December researching how federal policies affect the ability of higher education and industry to engage in high technology research and development.

OTA is a non-partisan agency created in 1972 to analyze complex issues involving science and technology for congressional committees. The agency helps policy-makers anticipate consequences of technological changes.

Hersh expects to create a research team to begin assessing higher education's ability to produce technological innovation and provide competently educated people.

Recently appointed to the Educational Task Force of the Governor's State Economic Development Council, Hersh says he has become increasingly sensitive to the economic implications of science and technology. He indicated he has been looking at how declining American investments in scientific and technological research and development may in part be responsible for decreases in U.S. economic productivity.

The fellowship program gives participants a chance to see how federal policy is created. Each fellow participates in a research study, meets with legislators and their staffs and attends briefing sessions.
